ANTI-REDS IN HITLER DEATH PLOT PARIS HINTS

Nazis Blame British

PARIS, Nov. 9 (AP)—French diplomatic circles today interpreted the attempt to assassinate Chancellor Hitler at Munich as indicating a split in the Nazi party over Germany's alliance with Soviet Russia.

One opinion reflected in the French press was that anti-Soviet elements attempted to kill der Fuehrer to gain control of the party.

Diplomatic sources said the blast was likely to have widespread repercussions and might possibly push Hitler into a sudden move. The newspaper L'Intransigeant said the incident showed that "the Gestapo (secret police), backbone of the regime, has either failed of its duty or itself participated in the plot."

BOMB FIRES NAZI IRE

ANNUAL celebration in honor of their leader's "beer hall putsch" was enjoyed to utmost here by high Nazi chieftains a year ago. They surround Adolph Hitler at table in beer cellar. But this year's fete ended in disaster, when bomb exploded, killing eight, injuring 60.

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Nov. 9—The time-bomb which wrecked the Buergerbraukeller in Munich, shrine of the Nazi party revolution, was designed not only to assassinate Adolf Hitler, but to wipe out the entire ruling hierarchy of the Third Reich, it was stated on high authority today.

All of the prominent Nazi leaders who, a few moments before, had heard Hitler threaten five years of merciless war on England escaped by a bare twelve minutes when "one blinding flash and then a stunning concussion" reduced the famous beer hall to a shambles.

Great Britain was held directly responsible by the German press and officialdom for the outrage last night which cost the lives of seven "old veterans of the party" and injured some 60 others.

Initial investigations indicated that the bomb was inside a central column of the beer hall. Evidence also was unearthed, it was understood, that the plot was not localized in Munich, but extended to Berlin.

An official casualty list released this afternoon announced that seven were dead, 25 seriously hurt and 38 others injured in varying degrees. The 25 seriously injured are undergoing hospital treatment.

(A number of arrests were reported today in a Reuters dispatch from Rome. The dispatch added that special measures were being taken against foreigners.)

As the original reward of 500,000 marks ($200,000) for information leading to arrest of the perpetrators was increased to 600,000 marks by popular subscription, authoritative quarters said that Heinrich Himmler's Gestapo was "on the trail of those responsible."

The accusation of British guilt was based directly upon Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's assertion that he hoped to live until Hitler and Nazism in the Reich have been destroyed.

HOLLAND FLOODGATES WAIT INVADERS; BELGIANS MASS

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 9 (AP)—The Netherlands cleared out villages in new "water line" regions today preparatory to defensive flooding, and Belgium raised her mobilization to a near peak figure of about 600,000 men.

Passenger service out of Amsterdam was ordered restricted, beginning at 4 p. m., "in view of extraordinary measures taken by the railway company." The order was believed generally to have been due to heavy precautionary movements of troops eastward.

The action of the two nations were interpreted as evidence of a wary determination to be ready for any turn in the European war.

Official sources in both insisted, however, that they feared no immediate danger for their respective countries.

VILLAGES EVACUATED

Military authorities of the Netherlands cleared out several villages in the main flood defense region near Utrecht and also removed the population of the hamlet of Lent, near Nijmegen on the east frontier.

(Utrecht is in central Holland while Lent is about 40 miles southeast.)

This is the Netherlands' first line of defense against German invasion.

The Belgians sent troops north to the border of the Netherlands and important defenses there were speeded up against the possibility of a German invasion of the Netherlands which then would sweep south into Belgium to outflank the Maginot Line.

(Germany has denied any intention of sending troops through Belgium or The Netherlands.)

Buses were requisitioned to provide for the removal of the residents of certain unidentified areas.

COOL TOWARD PEACE

Official circles in the Hague said the only direct reaction to the offer of mediation Tuesday by Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold so far had come from the Scandinavian sovereigns.

They described the reception by belligerents as cool, but said this did not mean they thought the war situation was more unfavorable.

(Prime Minister Chamberlain in an address read for him in London said Britain would reply after consultation with the dominions and her allies.)

BULLETIN

BRUSSELS, Nov. 9 (INS)—Official British circles in Brussels today expressed disbelief of reports that Germany had delivered an "ultimatum" to Holland, demanding control of a Dutch port by Germany. Belgian circles were also skeptical of the report.

War Diary

69th Day

Behind the Front—The attempted assassination of Adolf Hitler, the killing of seven Nazi leaders and wounding of 60 others plunged Europe into new confusion today. Germany blamed Britain for the bombing. Britain laid the outrage to the "gentleman who engineered the Reichstag fire." French diplomatic circles interpreted the bombing as indicating a split in the Nazi party over Berlin's alliance with Moscow. Meanwhile, many arrests were reported at Munich. Hitler, himself, missed possible death by only a few minutes. In London, Sir John Simon read a speech which an attack of gout prevented Neville Chamberlain from delivering. It amounted practically to a reply to Hitler's speech of yesterday and was to the effect that England is in the war to the end, no matter how long it lasts. On the heels of the two-nation plea, leading United States Senators planned a new appeal to Roosevelt for negotiations aimed at an armistice in the European war.

On the Front—Increased activity along the entire Western Front was reported in the official Paris war communique today. Sharp encounters were reported with the German forces, especially between the Moselle and Saar rivers. Near Luxembourg, French machine gun fire repulsed five Nazi attacks. French authorities expressed the belief that the long predicted Nazi push through Belgium or Holland was near. Holland made ready her floodgates to repel invasion and Belgium massed its troops. Meanwhile Belgian bonds and other foreign securities dropped sharply on the world's bourses.

On the Sea, in the Air—The American freighter City of Flint began discharging her cargo today in Bergen, Norway, and will return to the United States in ballast. Presence of three British cruisers in South American waters led foreign naval men to believe they were concentrating on the hunt for the German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer, on the loose either in the South Atlantic or the South Pacific. A 961-ton British merchant ship was sunk in the North sea, with two of her crew missing. Activity in the air was comparatively quiet.

Invasion Fears Hit Currencies

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 (AP)—Hints the European war may soon take on a more destructive aspect, involving perhaps an invasion of Belgium and the Netherlands, sent leading foreign currencies down in terms of the dollar today, the Belgian belga touching its lowest figure since 1933.

Belgian bonds likewise fell off, the 6 per cent issue of 1955 dropping about $30 per $1000 face value.

The belga was quoted around noon at 16.43 cents, a fall of .07 of a cent overnight.

The pound sterling dipped 9 cents to $3.82.

Pressure on sterling, it was said, was of varied origin. Banks in the Far East and South American countries were said to have been selling in the local market, and it was asserted in some quarters Russia had also sold. Lifting of the arms embargo and the possible purchase of huge war supplies in this country naturally operated, it was said, to lower the value of the pound.

The French franc and Canadian dollar declined about in proportion to the slump in sterling.

GERMANS TO ANSWER

"England will learn how we keep our loyalty to our dead," Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' newspaper, Der Angriff, declared.

"November 8 was the last signal."

Nachtausgabe said:

"Now the Germans will answer!"

Hitler and Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering personally directed the search for the would-be assassins, whose apprehension "dead or alive" has been ordered. They carefully scrutinized scores of pictures of the wrecked beer hall, flown to Berlin from Munich, in the hope of discovering some telling evidence.

Some arrests have been made, authoritative German quarters hinted today.

"It is not possible to give any details at present about the number of possible arrests and the

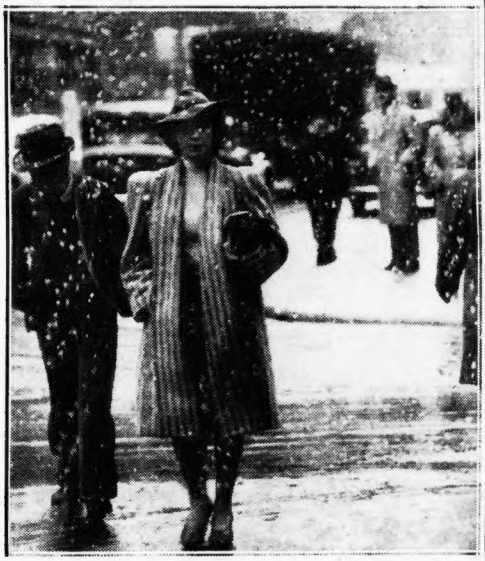
Call Hub Political Chiefs in Radio War

Revealing a Boston radio war, with political campaigns and hot radio campaign speeches as a background, the Federal Communications Commission from Washington began hearings today at the Federal Building.



SNOW VISITS HUB—First snowfall for Boston came as a surprise today, and, as here, many were caught with light apparel. Scene above is Summer and Washington sts., with milady and mi-gent attempting crossing of slippery street.

The hearings are on application of the Mayflower Broadcasting Corporation to be allotted a Boston license on the frequency now used by John Shepard's station WAAB.

Summoned before the commission were a dozen prominent personages, including two former governors, a former congressman and a former mayor.

Over a WAAB protest, a phonographic record of a speech by Leland Bickford, editor-in-chief of the Yankee and Colonial Network news services, was introduced.

CURLEY SUMMONED

The purported radio address, sponsored by the Tobin Campaign Committee in the 1937 mayoralty fight, was a scathing arraignment of three other candidates—former Gov. James M. Curley, former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols and Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley.

It ended with a plea for the election of Maurice J. Tobin and a request to "stand with me and help us drive these gangs out of Boston."

Curley and Nichols were among those summoned before the federal commission, and another was Francis B. Masterson, of Roslindale, campaign manager for Curley in the mayoralty and other fights.

Introduction of the Bickford speech record and manuscript came while Masterson was being examined on the witness stand by James Gum, counsel for the Mayflower Broadcasting Corp.

Atty. Paul Spearman, counsel for Station WAAB, objected strenuously to introduction of the speech but was overruled by Trial Examiner George B. Porter of the commission.

SPEECH SCORED CURLEY

John Shepard, Jr., sat beside Spearman and frequently passed written notes and papers to the attorney during progress of the hearing.

Under Atty. Gum's questioning, Masterson said he recalled the Bickford radio speech of Oct. 30, 1937, and recalled that Bickford likened Curley to inmates of the Deer Island House of Correction, stating that Curley was tied up with all the forces of corruption.

The others summoned as witnesses in the radio war, in addition to those mentioned on income tax matters of many of his associates. Some of them have believed he had "talked."

DETECTIVES OPEN LOVE CULT PROBE; WILL QUESTION 30

MARBLEHEAD, Nov. 9—A new and dramatic turn was given the strange "love cult" case here today when an assistant district attorney and detectives from the office of Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Cregg of Salem arrived to take charge of the case.

Previously, a "secret investigator" acting for the school committee, had been in charge of the probe that was begun following the suicide of 15-year-old Florence Bigelow, high school freshman, on Oct. 27.

At least 30 witnesses are to be questioned in the case that is seething through the entire life of this community. The investigation will take at least a week.

Among the witnesses are those who accuse a woman high school teacher of casting such a spell that the girl was influenced to take her own life out of despair.

Supt. of Schools James W. Vose, questioned about the appearance of Asst. Dist. Atty. James Roy and detectives today, said:

"Well, the Parent Teachers Association charged us with laxity in pushing the investigation, didn't it?"

It was indicated the case would be probed to its very source.

JUDGE ALSCHULER DIES

CHICAGO, Nov. 9 (AP)—Judge Samuel Alschuler, who retired from the seventh federal circuit court of appeals three years ago, died today after a long illness.

Maine Mystery In Girl Killing

ST. ALBANS, Me., Nov. 9 (AP)—Somerset County authorities opened an investigation today into the fatal shooting of 13-year-old Phyllis Rummery of Ripley after an autopsy was performed.

The girl, victim of a 12-gauge shotgun charge in the chest, was found dead yesterday 100 feet from the home of her employer, Alfred Hilton.

Pending further inquiries, Sheriff Martin J. Gallant declined to disclose findings of the autopsy.

The weapon was found 12 feet from the body, Gallant said, but Ralph Hilton, 29, son of her employer, told officers he had moved it when he discovered the body. The elder Hilton said the girl had requested permission to take the gun to go hunting, and added she was familiar with fire-arms.

Gallant said the girl, one of a family of five, had been employed at housework by the Hiltons since Oct. 19. Her mother is dead. Her father is a farmer.

O'Hare Killers Laid In Wait With Bombs

A plot to bomb the home of Edward J. O'Hare, dog and horse racing czar of Taunton, Chicago and St. Louis, brought new mystery today in the gangland slaying of the well-known turfman.

Even while three carloads of assassins trailed him from his Chicago race track, other killers were waiting to blow up his suburban Glencoe residence if he reached there unscathed.

The man, who enemies of dog racing in Massachusetts accused of directing gangland dog tracks and interests, did not have a chance. His enemies cut off every avenue of escape in hurriedly but thoroughly laid execution plans.

This Chicago police divulged today after questioning a maid. A mystery telephone call warned the woman to leave the house at once. It was going to be bombed and her death was not wanted.

But the head of the Taunton dog track met death in trying to outspeed his killers in a race along a Chicago boulevard. His automobile crashed and shotgun blasts killed him instantly as he lay slumped over the steering wheel.

TWO POLICE THEORIES

Authorities had two theories today in the motive for his death.

It was generally believed he had quarrled with others in his big string of enterprises.

Others believed a recent visit to the federal bureau of investigation led to his death.

It was learned he had been ques-

SAVED FROM BLAZE—Fires are fun for Marie Yeoman, two, and her nine-months-old sister, Irene, as they gayly view the excitement from a safe vantage point after being carried from their third floor apartment on Erie st., Cambridge. A boy, John Ciccarelli, 14 (below), gave the alarm.

Boy, 14, Saves 5 From Flames

A quick-thinking 14-year-old boy today risked his life to save five persons, two of them babies, when he dashed into a smoke-filled house in Erie st., Cambridge, and escarted them to safety, then turned in a fire alarm.

The young hero, John Ciccarelli, noticed wisps of smoke coming from cellar windos of the three-story dwelling across the street.

He ran across the street, forced open the front door and plunged through billows of smoke to warn the first-floor tenants, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perkins.

Running up to the top floor, shouting "fire," he found Mrs. Yoeman alone with her children, Irene, nine months, and two-year-old Marie.

With Marie in his arms, he guided Mrs. Yoeman down the stairs, she clutching Irene.

The second floor was unoccupied. Once in the street with all safe, the youth raced to the corner and sounded the alarm. Firemen fought the blaze for more than 20 minutes and estimated the damage at $1000.

PETZOLD CHARGES COP AIDED PLOT

How he and Patrolman Joseph F. Allen sat in a Boston police cruising car and planned the robbery of a Huntington ave. restaurant was described by former Police Officer Paul Petzold in Superior Court today.

Petzold added that the police car radio was turned on and the car parked only 10 feet from the restaurant at the time.

Allen and Petzold, with William Gillar and Albert Abrams, are charged with conspiring to rob the stand. Allen is also charged with attempting to bribe another officer.

ASKED ABOUT SAFE

Petzold, brought from Charles st. jail, where he is awaiting sentence following his plea of guilty to charges of conspiracy, robbing, "friendly" breaking and entering several weeks ago, said that he met Allen several times after the "friendly" break into the S. S. Pierce store in Copley Sq.

"The first time I saw him he said the fellows at the station thought I had something to do with the Pierce Job. Then he said: 'Howard Johnson's stand has more money.' I said I'd speak to the fellows about it," Petzold testified.

"That night I met Gillar and Abrams and told them. They said to ask him about the safe. Then nevt time I saw Allen he was in in prowl car with another officer. The car was parked right at the Howard Johnson stand itself, and when the other cop went inside, I talked to Allen about the job.

"I asked him where the safe was and he said upstairs. He said there was a back door. I went back to my car that was out on the street and told Gillar and Abrams and they said there was a holiday coming, there would be more money then, and we should wait.

"In a few days I saw Allen again and he said after the stand was closed a woman was left to clean up. I asked him if he could get her into conversation while we went up stairs and he said yes.

"When I told that to Gillar and Abrams, Gillar said: 'Well if he can't we'll put a bag over her head.'

"I told Allen that, and he thought it would be better if he wasn't there. He said if it was all right he'd leave a note in the keyhole of the stand. I told him whatever we got he'd get his share. After the holiday I saw him, and he told me to forget it."

WIFE IS WITNESS

Petzold's testimony stopped there when Judge Francis J. Good called a recess.

Previously, Mrs. Yvonne Petzold, Paul's wife, had been called to the stand. She broke into tears when pressed on cross-examination and then testified:

"Once when I was talking to Allen I told him I wouldn't believe what Paul said on a stack of Bibles."

She testified that once when she happened to be standing in the cellar of her home she heard Abrams, Giller and her husband holding a conversation in which the words "Howard Johnson stand" were allegedly used.

Reds Wait Nazi Fall, Says Harvard Man

The only circumstance that would bring actual war between Russia and any of the western democracies would be the collapse of the Nazi government machine, Samuel Hazard Cross, famous educator and Harvard professor of Slavic languages and literature, told a Hearst roundtable luncheon at the Boston Chamber of Commerce today.

A famous educator, former United States Army officer, trade commissioner, attache to various United States embassies and former resident of Russia, Professor Cross told his audience.

"Russia will fume against the capitalist powers, but its activity in the near future will be in words, not deeds. She has no intention of engaging in any major offensive military operations now.

COULD NOT RATION ARMY

"Maintenance of the present Soviet armed forces imposes a heavy strain on Soviet economy, and impedes any improvement in the Russian standard of living. It is questionable whether they could ration a large military force in the field.

"For the occupation of Poland Russia had to mobilize troops that were indifferently equipped and uniformed, and these have already been withdrawn because of the difficulty of maintaining them in Poland.

"Russia was fully cognizant of the British hope that Nazi energies would move eastward, bringing German and Russia into conflict, and England refused to give Russia what she wanted in the Baltic, so for these reasons the Soviets eagerly accepted the Nazi invitation to cover the German rear.

"They were sure the Germans would be too occupied in the west to bother about taking anything on the east.

"Now Russian gains in Poland and the Baltic have blocked German expansion eastward toward the Black Sea and the Baltic, and they hope peace will be restored so they can go back to the work of building up their economic system.

WON'T FIGHT FINNS

"Should the Nazi government breakdown in a proletarian revolution in Germany, and should the democracies attempt to put down the revolution, the Soviets would go to war.

"Germany is getting no oil or fuel from Russia because of the impossibility of transporting it; nor will they get any in the near future.

"Russia asked Finland for certain small but important islands in the Finnish gulf, readjustment of the frontier northwest of Leningrad, cession of certain northern territory that would give Russia a frontier with Norway, and purchase or lease of the Finnish port of Hango.

"Though disposed to negotiate other Russian demands, because of the fact that Hango is the one Finnish port that is ice-free the year around the Finns are resolved to fight rather than to give it up.

"While the Soviets had no compunction about raiding Poland once it collapsed, they are likely to refrain from attacking a firmly established state. An attack on Finland seems improbable; and the same situation prevails regarding Roumania."

2 GUILTY IN CAFE BEATING

In a surprise move, Daniel Galiano, 44-year-old South End restaurant proprietor, and his waiter, Walter G. Hyatt, changed their pleas of not guilty to guilty of assaulting a federal marshal as their case opened its second day in federal court today.

In a crowded courtroom, counsel for Galiano and Hyatt, Daniel J. Gallagher and Felix Marcella, went into a lengthy conference with United States Atty. Edmund J. Brandon and Judge Hugh D. McLellan, then the change was made. Judge McLellan said disposition would be made next Tuesday.

The trial grew out of a fist fight in Galiano's South End cafe last July when Deputy Marshal Paul H. Skuse attempted to serve a civil judgment of $880 against the cafe.

Bowers on New Fire Dept. Job

Deputy Chief William F. Bowers of the Boston Fire Department was made chief of the Boston Protective Fire Department today at the meeting of the board of directors of that organization.

The office of deputy superintendent of the protective department was abolished and the office of chief, to which Bowers was named, was created.

Bowers, who is married and the father of four children, lives in Washington st., Roslindale.

He was appointed to the fire department as a private in 1903, in 1929 he was made lieutenant, in 1935 captain an din January of this year promoted to deputy chief in command of the working force of the department.

Hingham Hears Of Sub Chase

A report that the French freighter San Jose was being chased by an unidentified submarine 1100 miles due east of Miami, Fla., was received today by the tropical radio station at Hingham.

The report was contained in a "general broadcast" according to the station. Source of the broadcast was unknown.

The message simply stated "SS San Jose being chased by unidentified sub latitude 24.34 north, longitude 57.58 west." It was picked up at 5:49 a. m., and no further word has been received, the station said. The position given would place the ship about 500 miles southeast of Bermuda.

Harvard Frosh Call for Arms

Harvard freshmen will have their arms full—too full—at their Friday night stag dance, unless more than 400 students buy tickets to the soiree.

The big problem grows out of the fact that over 600 girls from Wellesley, Boston University, Simmons and Radcliffe are expected, whereas up to date only 200 Harvard collegiates have bought ducats.

The affair will be held in the Memorial Hall, Harvard. Busses will transport the co-eds from every college except Radcliffe, the committee has announced.

"Radcliffians can walk—it's just around the corner anyway," a spokesman said.

HUB LIGHT RATES STIR LASKER

David Lasker, member of the Boston Finance Commission, today announced plans for a prospective investigation of the rates Boston consumers pay for light and power.

He will discuss with the other members, he declared, on the advisability of probing the entire light and power setup, as it affects Boston.

Disclosing that a recent statement by Congressman Rankin of Mississippi referring to "overcharges by New England concerns" had prompted his decision Lasker said.

"I feel that I owe a duty to the people here, in view of the enormous amount of power and electricity used in the institutions and buildings operated and controlled by the city of Boston, and also by the hundreds of thousands of consumers throughout the city."

Winthrop Lines Up For New El Fight

Winthrop residents prepared for a new battle today over recommendation by a special transportation commission that they accept the law which would substitute service of the defunct Narrow Guage railroad by the Boston Elevated.

On Oct. 9, voters of the town turned down just such a proposal after town leaders pointed out it would mean a 15 cent fare and payment of any deficit incurred by the Elevated in operation.

Boy Slays His Chum Over Dollar Watch

DETROIT, Nov. 9 (AP)—A 14-year-old high school boy was held today after police said he confessed killing a chum in an argument over a dollar watch.

Chief Floyd M. Crichton of the suburban Lincoln Park police announced that the boy, George McClelland, had admitted stabbing Howard Rucker, 17-year-old filling station employe, Tuesday night after arranging it to look as though Rucker had been killed by robbers.

Throughout a day of questioning, Chief Crichton said, the boy had given a detailed account of how robbers entered the station, killed Rucker and knocked him unconscious as he tried to defend his fallen chum.

Minute descriptions which he gave of two men set police to watching for them.

Crichton said the boy finally gave this account of the quarrel:

"Last week I had a new dollar watch. Howard grabbed it from me. He wouldn't give it back. So I took his clock.

"I went back three days ago and gave his clock back. I thought the joking was over, but Howard wouldn't give me the watch. Last night I went back again and told him to give me the watch.

"He wouldn't. He was cleaning his nails with his hunting knife. He lunged at me and I was scared.

"He hit me on the side of the head. I fell down on the floor.

"Then he dropped the knife. I grabbed it and stabbed him in the back. I stabbed him twice—I don't remember stabbing him again."

Later, the boy said, he must have fainted. A neighboring filling station attendant found him unconscious on the floor with Rucker's body nearby.

KELLY LEADS RACE FOR COUNCIL HEAD

City Councilor John B. Kelly of Dorchester appeared today as likely choice for president of the 1940 Boston City Council, even as recounts were prepared in Boston and three other cities.

Now entering his third year at City Hall as a result of his re-election by carrying all of the 15 precincts of his district, Kelly is regarded as one of Mayor Tobin's loyal council supporters.

He is a brother of former Lieut.-Gov. Francis E. Kelly, who made public appeal for his re-election on the record of his service to the people of Ward 15, and who also endorsed the candidacy of John C. Wickes, who was elected by a sizable majority as successor to Councilor Robert G. Wilson, Jr., in Ward 17, Dorchester.

TOBIN TO STAY NEUTRAL

Mayor Tobin will undoubtedly remain neutral in the contest for council president as he has in the past.

Early this year Kelly was boomed for president of the 1939 body and at one period of the balloting could have mustered eight of the 12 necessary votes.

He chose to act as arbiter between his warring colleagues, however, and as a result of his mediation George A. Murray, of South Boston, with his support, won the coveted honor.

With a recount scheduled for tomorrow, City Clerk Frank Grant of Newton revealed today that Mayor-elect Paul M. Goddard had increased his lead to 150 votes over Mayor Edwin O. Childs as the result of a check-up on election tally sheets. The previous margin of Goddard's victory was 90 votes.

Grant said tally sheets had been re-examined in Wards 2, 3 and 6 with mis-calculations discovered in all three.

The vote was Childs 10,972 Goddard 11,062 in final official returns.

CALLS FOR RECOUNT

In Westfield, Mayor Raymond H. Cowing, defeated by a margin of only 127 votes by Mrs. Alice D. Burke, named the first woman mayor in the history of Massachusetts, circulated similar petitions for a recount.

In Springfield, with only 497 votes separating them, Republican Candidate Donald M. Macauley sought a recount of the vote of 25,107 to 24,610 by which Mayor Roger L. Putnam was re-elected.

Closest Boston battle was in Ward 1 where Susan B. Donovan won by a margin of but three votes. A police guard has been put over the ballot boxes and both Mrs. Donovan and James S. Coffey, her defeated rival, assigned guards pending a recount.

Other council candidates seeking recounts are Sidney Rosenberg of Ward 14, Dorchester; George Mc Mahon of Ward 9 and John I. Fitzgerald of Ward 2, West End.

New Roadhouse Burns in Dedham

A 25-room roadhouse, under construction on the new Providence highway, Dedham, was destroyed by fire today. Damage was estimated at $25,000.

The structure, a two and on-half-story affair, was owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Blatz, who occupied a completed section in the building.

A general alarm was sounded. It was necessary to pump water a half-mile.

Snow Cruiser Hits Fast Pace

PAVILION, N. Y., Nov. 9 (AP) – Bowling along at a good clip the Byrd expedition's snow cruiser rumbled through Canandaigua, N. Y., on its way to Boston shortly before 9 a. m. today.

State police estimated the 75,000-pound machine had covered 90 miles since it left here at daybreak.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd said today he intended to hold further telephone conferences with Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, commander of the luckless snow cruiser, Penguin, before deciding definitely whether the giant machine would join the government's Antarctic expedition at Boston or Philadelphia.

The North Star is to call at Philadelphia to pick up two airplanes before departing for the south polar region and Byrd said it was possible the snow cruiser's course might be altered so that it could be taken aboard at the Pennsylvania port.

Loading of the North Star, which carries much of the food for the expedition, was almost completed, but Admiral Byrd said sailing probably would be held up "until Sunday."

Gandhi 'Free India' Plea Feeds Unrest

BOMBAY, Nov. 9 (AP)—A strongly worded demand for India's political freedom, delivered by Mohandas K. Gandhi, added new fuel today to the fire of Indian unrest which Britain has been trying to subdue pending the end of the European war.

Rejecting the British contention that India must achieve unity before acquiring Dominion status, the wizened, 70-year-old Hindu Nationalist leader declared at Wardha that only through "freedom from bondage" can his people solve their internal problems.

"Once a declaration to free India, not in easy stages but at once, is made," Gandhi said, "an interim solution will be found easy. The protection of the rights of minorities will then become simple."

He added that "if the time has not yet come for acceptance of the fundamental truth, I would suggest that a further effort to reach a solution be suspended."

BRITISH ENVOY SILENT

The utterance brought no immediate reply from the British viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, who had announced Sunday that he would continue his efforts to reconcile differences between Gandhi's dominent All-India Congress party, the Moslem League and the Indian princes.

Linlithgow has been seeking to reform Indian governments which resigned in six provinces in protest against Britain's present refusal to consider demands for dominion status.

The viceroy disclosed he had offered cabinet posts to members of the opposing factions, but had met with refusal.

DATES FROM 1937

The present situation in India dates back to April 1, 1937, when the All-India Federation of 11 provinces came into being under act of the British Parliament (India Act of 1935).

The act granted the provinces a measure of autonomy, permitting them to elect their own governments while the federal administration remained in the hands of the British viceroy and an executive council. The powers of the council are chiefly advisory.

Gandhi's congress party, of which Rajendra Prasad is president took control of eight provinces at the first election, and has agitated almost continually since that time for India's political independence.

BROUGHT TO HEAD

The issue was brought to a head last Oct. 17 by a British "white paper" written by Lord Linlithgow, which said flatly that discussion of complete independence or dominion status must be delayed for the duration of the war in Europe.

Gandhi immediately asked the Indian governments in the eight provinces controlled by his party to resign. All but two complied.

British Warships Hunt Nazi Raider

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 9 (AP)—Foreign naval experts expressed belief today the presence of three speedy British cruisers in Argentint waters indicated reinforcements had been sent in an effort to run down the German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer, credited generally with sinking the British merchantman Clement off the Brazilian coast Sept. 30.

The 10,000-ton cruiser Cumberland was due here today; the 6985-ton Ajax left here only yesterday; the 8390-ton Exeter arrived today at Mar Del Plata to refuel. They constitute the entire cruiser strength of the normal British South Atlantic division.

British Nip Plot On S. African Industry

LONDON, Nov. 9 (INS)—Discovery of a Nazi plot to sabotage the industry of South Africa and stage a subversive movement against the government itself was announced in an authoritative broadcast from Capetown today.

Britain Won't Quit Is Reply to Hitler

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Nov. 9—Adolf Hitler has sponsored the doctrine of force in Europe, and force will be Great Britain's reply, Prime Minister Chamberlain told Nazi Germany and the world today.

In a speech read to the Lord Mayor's inaugural luncheon by Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon, owing to the prime minister's indisposition from an attack of gout, Chamberlain held out little hope that the mediation offer of Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold would be productive of success.

"To those who speak no language but force, force is the only answer," Chamberlain said in obvious reply to Hitler's speech at the Buergerbrau in Munich last night a short while before his attempted assassination.

WON'T LAY DOWN ARMS

"Since we have been compelled to take up arms, we shall not lay them down until we are assured that Europe has been freed from the threats ao long paralyzing the life of her peoples . . .

"Events have shown that the stiff-necked men to whom Germany handed over guidance of her destinies would be satisfied with nothing less than repetition of forcible attainment of their desires which they successfully tried before, and upon them must lie responsibility for the consequences."

Expressing appreciation of the "lofty motives" which prompted Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold to make their offer of mediation, Chamberlain's speech said:

"I confess I am not very hopeful of a satisfactory response from the German chancellor in view of past experience. Nevertheless, we do not want to continue the war a day longer than necessary if a satisfactory settlement can be obtained another way.

LAUDS EMBARGO REPEAL

"In due course it will be the duty of the government to tender His Majesty's advice as to the nature of a reply, but beforehand it will naturally be necessary to consult the Dominions, our friends and allies."

Repeal of the neutrality act by the United States Congress, Chamberlain said "was a momentous event."

"While affording America the means of maintaining her neutrality, it reopens for the Allies the doors to the greatest storehouse of supplies in the world," he said.

Commenting on this "strangest of wars," the prime minister declared.

"It is no war, but rather a sort of siege.

"We do not know how long this phase will last, or whether at any moment it may not be changed into violent conflict. But we can see at any rate that the position of the Allies as the weeks have passed has strengthened instead of deteriorated."

The mutual assistance pact signed by Britain and France with Turkey, "will be a powerful instrument for peace in southeastern Europe," he said.

RED GAIN, NAZI LOSS

"On the other hand," Chamberlain added, "the Soviet-German pact gained great advantages for the Soviet but brought only humiliation and loss to Germany."

The Prime Minister paid tribute to men of the British army, navy and air force who already have died in action.

"We have no reason to regret that while still strengthening our defenses and building offensive power there have been no major battles," he said.

British Lay Bomb Plot to Germans

LONDON, Nov. 9 (AP)—British official sources scoffed today at Nazi suggestions that British secret agents were responsible for the blast last night in the Munich hall where Adolf Hitler had been attending a celebration.

"Doubtless the gentlemen who engineered the Reichstag fire know how to do these things," a spokesman said.

Panama Ship Shift Protested

NORTHAMPTON, Nov. 9 (AP)—Charging that the contemplated transfer of American merchant ships to Panama registry would subject this country to the risk of war unnecessarily, Mrs. Arthur D. Lynn, national president of the Mothers of American Sons, urged mothers today to telegraph to President Roosevelt their opposition to such a course.

"This transfer would invite sabotage and attack at our most vulnerable point in national defense—the Panama Canal," Mrs. Lynn told a mass meeting. "Regardless of technicalities, it is an evident violation of the will of the people of this country that any such risk should be taken that might lead us into war."

U. S. Denies Kuhn Plea for Delay

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 (INS)—Fighting every step of the way with the legal weapons of a well-prepared defense, Fritz Kuhn, chief of the German-American Bund, went on trial today, charged with larceny from his own organization.

A crowded lobby in the old criminal courts building silently inspected the bund chief when he arrived with counsel, but attendance in the courtroom was limited to newspapermen and prospective jurors.

Kuhn wore a dark gray suit, gray soft hat and light brown topcoat.

In his opening statement Asst. Dist. Atty. Herman J. McCarthy sketched the history of the claimed larcenies, which total $14,500.

The first half hour of Kuhn's attendance in the courtoom was given over to defense motions for the postponement of the trial or change of venue, all of them denied.

McCarthy, addressing the prospective jurors, read a list of names of persons, he said, might be called on to testify in the case or whose names might be mentioned.

The list included the names of Cong. Martin Dies, Gustav Elmer, national director of the Bund; Albert Osborn, handwriting expert; Virginia Gogswell of California, Gen. Van Horn Moseley, U. S. A., retired; Count Vonsiatsky, white Russian leader; Knights of the White Camelia, Silver Shirts and other organizations identified with vigilante movements of one kind or another.

URGE F. D. PLEA FOR PEACE

By ROBERT A. McGILL

International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9 (INS)—A renewed appeal to President Roosevelt to initiate negotiations for an armistice in the European war was voiced by leading senators today following the Dutch Belgian offer of mediation.

The peace group, which includes Senators Wheeler (D.) of Montana, Thomas (D.) of Utah, and Johnson (D.) of Colorado, were of the opinion that presidential support of the Dutch-Belgian proposal might lead to actual negotiations.

Their proposal followed closely on the heels of statements by Sen. Borah (R.), of Idaho, and other leaders in foreign affairs, to the effect that the United States should do all in its power to bring peace to Europe.

All the senators, regardless of political party, expressed the hope that the President will take advantage of every valid opportunity to put this nation on record in support of any proposals that might lead to an end of the war.

"Certainly the President should enthusiastically approve the bold and commendable action of little Belgium and Holland, thereby lending the full weight of our prestige and power to their proposal," Johnson said.

"I think this is an opportune time for all the neutrals of the world, including the United States, to act in unison in demanding that the belligerents state specifically their war aims and offer to the belligerents their good services in promoting understanding," he added.

Senators See Hope For New Peace Bid

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

Special to the Boston Evening American

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—Washington continued today to watch with anxiety, mixed with hope, for signs that the latest movement for a negotiated peace in Europe is making more headway behind the scenes than is apparent.

Those familiar with the methods of diplomacy were generally of the opinion that Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands and King Leopold of the Belgians did take their dramatic step without assurances in advance from London, Paris, and even Berlin, that the overture would not be regarded as untimely.

This was considered highly probable today by Sen. Elbert D. Thomas, Utah, a member of the foreign relations committee.

"I regard the gesture by the queen and the king as a very hopeful sign," said Sen. Thomas.

"There is an unconscious unity developing among the neutrals of the world. We see it in the Balkans, in the Oslo states, and now in the lowland countries.

"Peace is in the air. I am not hopeful of immediate results, because both sides have got to say what they are fighting for and that has not occurred yet and will not occur until many feelers have been put out. This is not a world war, although it is a big war and could become very serious.

"However, the neutrals are in far greater proportion than in the World War. It is to our interest to keep as much of the world neutral as possible. The tempering influence of neutrality is steadily at work."

Secretary of State Hull today again declined to comment upon the initiative toward peace that has been taken by Queen Wilhelmina and King Leopold.

Sen. William H. King, Utah, said he believed that the overtures had set the European stage for a dramatic and effective move by Mussolini to end the war, and he anticipated some such development.

SEE END OF NARROW GAUGE PAY

The Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad will not have enough money to pay its employes after next month, Atty. Cushing Goodhue, counsel for the road stated today at a State Public Utilities Commission hearing.

He spoke on the petition of the road to abandon service.

"Cash resources are insufficient to pay known bills," he said. "In addition, 57 tort cases, filed since July, 1937, when the road filed a petition in bankruptcy in federal court, are pending and no lawyer can properly estimate how much money will have to be paid out to settle them.

"When the road will close is uncertain. The road will not be able to pay its employes after December.

"The people of Winthrop had their chance to keep the road running by having the Boston Elevated take over that section of the Narrow Gauge, but rejected the legislative act passed on the last day of the last session of the Legislature."

LEWIS, GREEN SEE F. D.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9 (INS)—With members of the National Maritime Union (CIO) threatening to march on Washington in protest over transfer of U. S. ships to foreign registry, President Roosevelt today summoned top labor leaders to the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt sought advice of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis, head of the Congress for Industrial Organization.

The U. S. Maritime Commission two days ago approved in principle an application of the United States Lines to transfer eight of its 11 transoceanic vessels to Panamanian registry.

Although agreeing with the commission on the legality of its tentative decision, Mr. Roosevelt nevertheless ordered a final decision deferred pending a more exhaustive investigation.

Meantime, the commission made public a list of 19 flag transfers authorized since the war broke out.

Of the transfers, 15 were authorized for the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. Of these, 14 were for transfer to Panamanian registry. Names of the tankers and their tonnage follow.

NAZIS LAY HITLER BOMBING TO BRITAIN

Wrath Turns on Foe; Start Big 'Manhunt'

number of persons placed in custody," the official radio said.

"FOREIGNERS" BLAMED

As police pressed their investigation, the wireless stressed that foreign influences, unable to conquer Nazism on the battlefield, sought to strike directly at Hitler.

"For years past," the wireless announcement said, "certain influential forces were openly and secretly at work abroad with the object of waging a struggle against National Socialism without regard to the means employed.

"These forces have now succeeded in kindling a war against Germany.

"It has become clear in the meantime, however, that Germany cannot be forced to her knees in either the military or economic field, and that the weapon of anti-German propaganda likewise has proved ineffective.

"Political circles here take the view that under these circumstances warmongers abroad have resolved to get rid of the leader of National Socialist Germany if possible."

Referring to repeated statements by Prime Minister Chamberlain and other British cabinet ministers, the radio declaration pointed out:

"Germany's enemies constantly repeat that the war is being waged not against the German nation, but solely against the National Socialist regime and especially against Hitler.

"Chamberlain himself on the day following the British declaration of war expressed the hope that he would live to see the day on which Hitler would be destroyed.

"The outrage will only have the result of uniting the whole German nation more firmly with its Fuehrer."

Berlin was calm, and flags flew everywhere. The throngs gathered in the hope of seeing Hitler in spite of the rainy weather. Hitler's speech delivered in the beer hall was rebroadcast today.

The explosion occurred at 9:21 p. m. Hitler and his aides had left the building only 12 minutes previously. The rush of war work compelled him to abandon his usual practice of sitting around in the Buergerbraukeller talking to his old comrades on the night of Nov. 8 each year, and likewise spared him from death or injury.

MET BY GOERING

(Editor's Note — Direct word from Berlin that no prominent Nazis were killed disposed of a Reuters report from Paris that Adolf Hess, deputy Nazi party leader, was "among the victims" of the explosion.)

Upon Hitler's return to Berlin, he was met at the Anhalter railway station by Goering, who was prevented by pressing duties from attending the Munich celebration.

Hitler immediately summoned a conference of his closest advisers at the chancellery, including Goering, Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Gen. Wilhelm Kietel, chief of staff; Goebbels and a number of other key men.

At noon Hitler received the Italian ambassador.

The leaders apparently avoided the explosion because they left for the Munich railway station ahead of the original schedule after Hitler made the shortest speech yet given in one of the annual beer hall celebrations.

BEER HALL IN RUINS

Authorities revealed that the high Nazi officials who accompanied him—Hess, Goebbels, Labor Front Leader Robert Ley, Cultural Supervisor Alfred Rosenberg and Secret Police Chief Himmler—were not injured.

The explosion wrecked the ceiling of the famous beer hall and today the spot was covered with a heap of debris nine feet high, due to collapse of a central column which caused the entire roof to cave in.

Meanwhile authorities announced the reward of 500,000 marks for information leading to seizure of the perpetrators.

By noon, this sum had been increased by the other 100,000 marks.

The known dead included the cashier of the beer cellar, Frau Henie, a radio technician named Weber, two storm troopers named Luck and Kaiser and one unidentified person, as well as a clerk, Leonard Reindl, and Eugen Schachta, a radio announcer.

ANOTHER MAN DYING

A member of the orchestra which played ata the beer cellar, Herr Kassberger, was reported dying.

Authentic circles indicated the attempt to assassinate Hitler will be used to launch a "great crusade against Great Britain."

They pointed out that anger among the German public thus aroused would do much to spur Germany's war efforts.

In addition, the explosion will be used as a "rallying point" for the entire nation in a drive against foreign agents who, Nazi circles declare, obviously were responsible for the explosion.

NAZI DRIVE BEGINS; INVASION FORECAST

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Nov. 9—Leading to belief that a major German offensive is imminent on the northeastern sector of the Franco-German front, German troops unleashed a series of heavy raids against advanced French positions today.

Five raids were caried out, each preceded by heavy artillery barrages.

It was learned that one German sortie was undertaken by an entire regiment instead of a mere company, and this fact was produced as evidence of an anticipated offensive.

French authorities predicted the expected German drive would serve as a cover for a German invasion of Holland or Belgium or both.

The French launched immediate preparations to meet a possible German thrust through the Low Countries.

Other Plots On Hitler That Failed

By the Associated Press

Almost from the start of Adolf Hitler's rise to power there have been repeated, but unverified, reports of attempts on his life.

The first escape from violent harm during his political career came in 1923, when troops broke up the Nazi putsch from the beer cellar wrecked by last night's explosion. Sixteen of Hitler's comrades were slain.

Assassination reports include:

March 7 ,1933—Two waiters arrested in Munich on charge of plotting t okill Hitler, just named Chancellor.

March 13, 1933—Count Arco-Valley placed under "protective arrest" when police said he announced intention of killing Hitler.

April 17, 1933—Paul Ourlowsky, medical student in Nazi uniform, arrested in Berchtesgaden with loaded pistol.

June 20, 1934—Rumor circulated and denied that Hitler was missed by rifleman as he attended funeral of Frau Karin Goering at Eberswalde.

June 22, 1934—Hermann Wilhelm Goering quells insubordination of his special guards as Nazi agents spike previous rumors of attempts on Hitler's life.

June 30, 1934—Edmund Heines, Breslau police chief reported slain as he rushed up to Hitler with a pistol when Chancellor personally led raid on Capt. Ernst Roehm's home in "blood purge."

July 6, 1934—Paris hears blood purge was prompted by shots fired at Hitler as he visited labor camp near Essen.

Oct. 14, 1934—Julius Streicher, anti-Semiate leader, charges "a murderer was bought for 50,000 marks to kill Hitler at Nuremberg party congress."

Dec. 18, 1934—Rumors that Hitler was wounded by a German girl denied by officials.

Jan. 6, 1935—Unconfirmed reports from Munich say two storm troopers shot at Hitler Dec. 31, but hit his chauffeur instead.

March 6, 1935—Copenhagen police arrest eight men, including three Americans, expressing fear they were plotting against Hitler.

June 15, 1935—Vienna newspaper says a companion of Hitler wounded in attack on him at Berchtesgaden retreat.

June 15, 1936—Paris newspapers report followers of late Captain Roehm conducting campaign of terrorism with death warnings sent to Hitler.

June 4, 1937—Helmuth Hirsch, 21-year-old Jewish grandson of a naturalized American, executed for attempt on life of Julius Streicher.

Oct. 7, 1938—Hitler struck in face and scratched by bunch of roses tossed during his triumphal tour of Sudetenland.

Hint Reds Laid Hitler Bomb

Ex-General Bares Russian 'War' on Nazis

Was the bomb that was intended to blow Dictator Adolf Hitler to another world planted in a Munich cellar by agents of Red Russia, Germany's present "ally"?

Since 1921, Germany has been the victim of a series of Russian "putsches," according to W. G. Krivitsky, former general of the Red army, in an article in the November 4 issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

Following the establishment of the Communist Third International—the Comintern—in Moscow, March 2, 1919, leaders of the Soviet dreamed of a "Bolshevist Europe" and to that end they at first tried to present their ideals to their neighboring countries at the point of a bayonet, and when that failed, turned to the "putsch," as the coup d'etat.

PLOTS ON GERMANY

In 1921 the situation in Moscow was desperate. There was famine, the peasants were revolting, sailors of the Kronstadt had rebelled and workers in Leningrad had begun a general strike. Zinoviev, president of the Comintern, sent his aide, Bela Kun, to Berlin with the order:

"There is a revolutionary situation in Germany; the Communist party must seize the government."

The German Communists were incredulous, but they obeyed orders.

On March 22 they instigated a strike in the Central German industrial centers of Mansfeld and Merseburg. On March 24 Communists took over the city administration buildings at Hamburg.

In Leipzig, Dresden, Chemnitz and other cities Communists attacked courthouses, city halls, banks and police stations; the official German Communist paper called for a revolution; a series of bombing outrages took place throughout Germany, including attempts to blow up public buildings and monuments in Berlin.

REDS MOWED DOWN

Also on March 24, the Communist workers in the huge nitrogen works at Leuna, armed with rifles and hand grenades, barricaded themselves inside the factory.

By early April the uprising had been put down. The Red effort to co-ordinate the outbreaks failed; the mass of workers did not join. The loyal party regulars who had [illegible] were ruthlessly mowed down. The leader of the German Communists, who had called the move "mad," was expelled.

In January, 1923, the French prepared to move into the Ruhr to collect reparations, and, hopeful that move would occupy Berlin, the Soviet decided to launch a new attack to bring Communism to Germany.

A group of six officers, including Krivitsky, were ordered to the starving, mad, chaotic country of post-war Germany; they "worked tirelessly" to create an elaborate network of spies to lay the groundwork for their schemes, a whole army system was worked out for the German Red army that was never to exist.

To achieve their ends, the Reds began to fight the Separatist movement that so nearly succeeded—to cut off the entire Rhineland from Germany and form an independent state; and everything was prepared for a Separatist coup.

Communists went into battle with German police against the Separatist; but as the Rhineland movement was defeated, the Reds went on. Police officials in Germany were murdered; and finally, in October, the uprising broke.

There was street fighting in Hamburg; workers attacked the police stations; the streets ran red.

But there was no support. Hamburg alone revolted. The Comintern in Moscow had decided to postpone the revolution—but the telegram announcing the change of plans did not arrive in time!

Kaiser's Son Under Arrest

LONDON, Nov. 9 (INS)—Former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Germany was placed under arrest in the Reich, then released on parole, within the last two weeks, a Reuters dispatch from Paris today said it was reported on the German frontier.

German police action, the story said, followed a demonstration in favor of restoration of the Hohenzollern dynasty while the ex-Crown Prince was walking in Potsdam, site of the palaces of the former kaisers. Police broke up the demonstrations, the Reuters account said.

We pick the best of the crop,—bright, clean, aromatic. We store the bales in dry cold air to prison their goodness against the day of brewing. We know how to blend them in a flavor always the same.

Stocks Turn Mixed After Early Climb

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 (AP)—Rallying efforts centering on steels and motors met with only half-hearted response in today's stock market. Scattered favorites tacked on gains of fractions to a point or so at the start, then backed away and prices were moderately irregular.

Boardrooms discussed pleasing home business trends, the narrow escape of Hitler in the Munich explosion, possibilities of a quick Nazi thrust in the presently static European war and the idea that, despite the apparent cold shoulder given recent peace proposals from Belgium and The Netherlands, diplomatic undercover steps to end the conflict might upset the market's applecart. World happenings, though, seemingly provided few speculative incentives.

Bonds and commodities were uneven. Securities in European bourses did better after forenoon irregularity. Another break in the British pound sterling in terms of the dollar provided a further confusing financial element.

Stocks ahead at one time—some eventually slipped—were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber common and preferred, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Sante Fe, Pennsylvania, Great Northern, Westinghouse and International Mercantile Marine.

Official figures indicating last week's freight loadings were off a shade more than seasonal were without unsettling repercussions in the carrier group. Pennsylvania was resistant from the beginning, continuing to reflect this road's optimistic dividend boost.

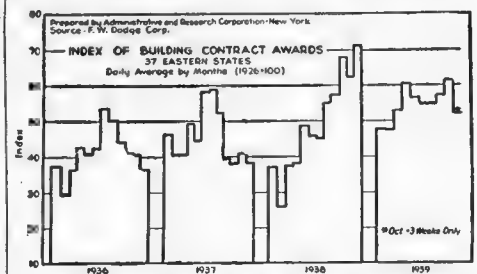
War Nervousness Halts Building



The U. S. building skyline has been pushing steadily higher in the past three years . . . But outbreak of what appeared to be a major war quickly levelled the trend . . .

OBSERVERS . . . Who credit so much of recovery to war factors pass lightly over construction . . . Fairness demands recognition of other factors but war is the top cause of hesitancy . . . Industrial building means borrowing and borrowing means mortgages . . . While war, rightly or wrongly, implies inflation . . . Put them together and you have hesitancy in assuming mortgages . . . And regardless of the potency of other building divisions little real progress is made when industrial construction is thwarted . . .

INGREDIENTS . . . Going into the contract awards index reproduced today besides industrial building are public works activity and home building . . . The latter is the most promising . . . Since the same inflation argument if it becomes more acute, will stimulate borrowing and home building . . . Particularly if prospects of rising material costs become pronounced . . . But industry, excepting aviation, machine tools and a few others, will probably be content to meet expansion needs through the purchase of unsued properties . . . And of the last many built in the golden 20's are still available . . . Otherwise floor space increases will meet output expansion requirements . . . • • •

ROBERT M. HANES . . . Newly elected president of the American Bankers Association addresses the Savings Bank Officers Club tonight . . . At the fall meeting scheduled at the Chamber of Commerce . . . He will speak on, The Strength of State Banking Systems . . . Mr. Hanes is president of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., of Winston-Salem, N. C. . . . He has long been active in ABA affairs and is a director of many leading corporations in his home state . . . Boyd N. Jones, vice-president and treasurer of the Provident Institutions for Savings and president of the Officers Club, will preside at the dinner meeting to which many leading commercial bankers have been invited . . .

STOCK PRICES . . . Continue to play hide-and-seek with plus and minus signs . . . And, gamelike, the only result achieved is temporary diversion . . . For watchers the repetitious performance has become boring . . . And it will continue so until they break it up . . . When the time will come is and has been for over two weeks, pure guesswork . . . But some day disgust with holding for appreciation, that won't come, or enthusiasm for blossoming dividends and blooming earnings, now unappreciated, will force an end to time wasting . . .

• • •

NOTEBOOK . . . West Virginia Pulp & Paper is said to be a candidate for a big board listing . . . The company's plants are reported operating at more than 60 per cent of capacity . . . Allied Stores is getting blue ribbon notices from statisticians . . . Some of whom say recent operations have been close to the best in history . . . With holiday trade proportionate to current business levels they think Allied will show about $1.20 a common share for the year ending Jan. 31, 1940.

MORE JOIN LEGION MOTHERS

Chosen first "Patrol Mother" in Cambridge, Mrs. Charles M. Houghton of 69 Sacramento st. today rallied her neighbors in a drive for additional Patrol groups of 49 women, in the nation-wide mobilization of mothers for the National Legion of Mothers of America.

The organization, which is hourly gathering scope and momentum in New England, seeks to keep the United States out of war of other nations. The mothers in Greater Boston are enthusiastic boosters. Mrs. Houghton, one of the pioneer organizers in the East, today coined a classic slogan:

"France," she said, "has its Maginot Line, Germany its Siegfried Line and the United States has its Mothers' Line—which we American mothers feel is the most powerful LINE of them all.

"Officials in Washington will discover that the feelings, the pleas and the fears of the mothers of this country, cannot be lightly regarded or ignored."

Mrs. Houghton has two sons, Charles, 15, and Warren, 17. Her father, Thomas P. Cahill of Somerville, served in France in the World War.

Mrs. Houghton, Mrs. Victor D. Ehler of 41½ Sacramento st., and Mrs. William R. Publicover of 46 Sacramento St., mapped plans today for formation of other patrol groups.

Mrs. Ehler's husband served in the World War. Her brother, James J. Torreto of Gloucester, perished with the entire crew of the U. S. Cyclops, whose fate was one of the naval mysteries of the war.

Mrs. Ehler has three sons, Kenneth, 22; Victor, 24, and James, 26. Mrs. Publicover has three sons, Lawrence, 31; William, 15, and Edward, 13.

Another Gold Star Mother joined the Legion of Mothers yesterday with a fervent pledge and a prayer.

MOTHERS! SIGN PLEDGE ON EDITORIAL PAGE

Mrs. Regina Zanni of 16 Ballou ave., Dorchester, said she "grasped at the chance to join such an organization."

"I lost a fine boy in the World War," added Mrs. Zanni, lips trembling. "He was Corp. Eugene Zanni of the 101st Infantry, Yankee Division. Gene was killed in action at Chateau Thierry, July 31, 1918.

"I have four other sons, all of military age. Charles served in the navy in the World War and is still in the navy. I fear for him if our country is drawn into the war in Europe. My other boys are Paul, 21, Henry, 31, and Joseph, 33, and I also have grandsons of military age.

"The war in Europe has brought back all my worries of World War This is Eugene's diary—faded and mud-stained. I look through it often—at the items he wrote in it while cold and wet and facing death.

"Do you wonder why I am anxious to join the Legion of Mothers? Do you wonder why mothers like me are worrying these days?"

The slogans of the Legion of Mothers won instant response:

1—To oppose the sending of American soldiers to fight on foreign soil.

2—To support a strong program for adequate national defense.

3—To combat all "isms" whose object is the destruction of the American form of government.

Plot to Bomb O'Hare Home Is Bared Here

On this phase, the F. B. I. refused to comment.

A memorandum found on the victim's body showed he had been in touch with federal agents. Also found in his pockets were a crucifix, a rosary and St. Christopher medal in a box marked with the tender words, "Happy Birthday."

WANTED TO QUIT "GAME"

An unfired .32-calibre revolver lay on the seat beside him. Fearful of enemies, his attackers struck before he had a chance to use it.

Investigators into the death of the millionaire racing man, father of Navy Lieut. Edward J. O'Hare, Jr., Annapolis graduate, considered the possibility that his death was the result of trouble over dog and horse racing activities.

They knew he had bought a home in Provincetown and had voiced a desire to quit the racing business because of "the heat."

An hour before the slaying, O'Hare left Sportsman's Park, of which he was president, where he was winding up the affairs of the racing season. Those racing interests extended from Chicago to Massachusetts to Florida.

O'Hare was the great man of mystery of Massachusetts' track at Taunton.

He wielded great influence there, but he was not hated as an officer, and held no official position. Once, in meeting charges made against him before the legislative committee on legal affairs, he made affidavit that he owned one eighth and one half per cent of the stock of the Taunton track.

In March 1937 he was accused before the legislative committee on legal affairs of being a "front" man for Al Capone. It was asserted at a hearing before this committee that he had put up nearly $300,000 to start the Taunton track.

The charges were made in connection with a petition to investigate dog racing in this state. Through his attorneys O'Hare denied ever having been associated with Capone and the investigation was voted down by the legislature.

O'Hare was described by his few associates as a genial, likable, well dressed, well mannered man of mystery. Part of the mystery was why he secluded himself in a sumptuously furnished pent house of four rooms in the east wing of the grand stand when at Taunton.

He also maintained a private suite in a Boston hotel and but rarely occupied it. And he was seldom seen in Boston and Providence the two large cities near the track.

For all his wealth and the supposed influence he wielded he lived an unobtrusive, rather than a spectacular career. He spent three or four months a year in this state. He traveled from the Miami track to this state in a hooded coat,

Canada Premier Hails Peace Here

Contrasting the Canadian-American border and the Maginot-Siegfried lines, Thane Campbell, premier of Prince Edward Island, Canada, told the Canadian-American League at the Parker House today that American borders are a lesson in international peace.

Guest of Mayor Tobin and Lieut Gov. Horace T. Cahill and feted by 50 members of the league, Premier Campbell is here to attend the league's annual convention. He said:

"Three thousand miles of border line between Canada and the United States and not one fortification, not one artillery gun!

"The confidence between America and Canada is the result of open-minded co-operation on understanding each other's rights, cultures and policies."

Later he was received at the State House by Gov. Saltonstall. Saturday he will be guest of Pres. James B. Conant of Harvard at the Harvard-Army game.

Fourteen of the 72 persons indicted at Boston were Chicagoans.

Others who surrendered or were taken into custody here so far were Mrs. Gertrude Becker, George Soayne, Morris Latker, James H. Van Natta and Thomas Steehan.

THE SKY RAIDERS

by Paul Whelton
Staff Writer and World War Flyer

IT IS summer of 1915, and above a German aerodrome at Douai on the western front a Boche Fokker is in grips with an English Bristol biplane.

Wings glint in the sunlight in this early hour after dawn, the machine guns chatter and the roar of motors fills the air—many motors, for the English have surprised the Boche on this summer day and have been dropping big explosive eggs on the field.

Beset by black-crossed bonnets, the bombers are lumbering away now but a lance-sergeant named Max Immelmann has picked this English Bristol out of the group of protecting English machines and the air duel is apart from the others.

Around and around the Boche and the Briton chase tails, then dart in, fire, bank and dart out again.

Now, suddenly, the nose of the Fokker goes up, the machine climbs swiftly, rolls in the gaze of the astonished Englishman—and then the Fokker is backtracking directly above, shooting down at him, just over his range.

The whining lead rips through fabric and wood. Splinters fly. Through the Englishman's elbow a ball crashes and his Bristol yaws wildly.

Neither the stunned Briton who discreetly decides to land while he is able, nor young Lance-Sergeant Immelmann, who follows him down, is aware of it then but this decidedly unwarlike-appearing German has set up a milestone in the new science of air-fighting.

He has, for the first time stumbled accidentally into an air maneuver that will be pocked up by all other aerial warriors and that will carry on his name for years to come the famous Immelmann turn, styled more technically by the French the renversement.

Until that day in 1915, aerobatics, as they became developed later in the World War and as they are known today, were confined to "looping the loop" and to spirals.

Ships went into spins, of course, but the frantic pilots, fighting the controls, seldom came out of them.

One day a pilot discovered that by putting his controls in neutral and, perhaps, reciting a short prayer, the machine would fly itself out of a spin, and in later practice even the prayer came to be omitted.

LANCE-SERGEANT Immelmann is said to have admitted that his discovery of the new turn was made after he had started up in a loop but then, fearing the Englishman above might get a fair shot at him in the inverted position at the top of the loop, he had thrown over his stick to get out of the loop somehow, and had been as surprised as anyone to find he had rolled over, reversed and now was bearing down on his foe.

Young Max Immelmann, who was to live only until June 18, 1916, when another Englishman, well versed now in this same trick, would shoot him down, was a cadet in Dresden when the World War began.

He entered the railway battalion, but passed into the reserve as a non-commisioned officer, postponing his commissioned rank to which he would be entitled on completion of his cadet course, in order to prosecute his technical studies.

He had done some flying before the war and had applied also for service with the flying corps. When this acceptance came through he re-entered active participation.

Although Immelmann encountered considerable difficulty, according to German records, in passing his final aviation tests (March 26, 1915) it is recorded that in Sept. of 1914 a German Taube (Taube, in German, means pigeon) appeared over Paris and dropped bombs on the French capital.

Also the flyer dropped notes, and these read:

"People of Paris! Surrender! The Germans are at your gates. Tomorrow you will be

LIEUT. IMMELMANN,
Air Scout."

Whether or not this pilot actually was Immelmann is uncertain, but in the volume, "German War Birds," by an anonymous German author calling himself "Vigilant," it is recorded "an adventure of a German airman whose name I am unable to trace, b t it took place in September, 1914."

This airman, flying a Taube, according to "Vigilant," dropped no bombs but was fired upon, and later that day carried a Bavarian major of a general's staff over Paris, the gallant old major, being pretty much punctured by well-aimed carbine bullets for his adventure.

At any rate, Immelmann, like Richthofen afterward, gave little promise of becoming a skilled flyer, and certainly not in September of 1914.

Slow to grasp the very rudiments of flying, according to the German records, he was frequently on the verge of being dropped from aviation during the training period.

It was not until after three sets of tests that he managed to pass it, March, 1915, and even after being assigned to service in the Champagne he continued his habit of cracking up his machine upon landing.

NO doubt, like hundreds of airmen to come after him, he may have retorted to scoffers, in the German equivalent:

"Any landing I can walk away from is a good landing."

Gradually, however, Immelmann began to rub off the rough spots and after a few months of flying at the front had become skilled.

Nor was it his Immelmann turn alone that he discovered, if something not in the process of being sought may be terms a discovery.

He actually did study out methods of dueling to be applied to air fighting, the most feasible method of attack, the best method of approach.

To Immelmann, credit is given for first utilizing the sun as a blinding background for his attack, and the fleecy clouds as screens behind which to slip up on some unwary opponent.

He studied and imparted the results of his study of enemy machines and marked the "blind spot" of each such machine for his fellow pilots in the 62nd section, of whom one was Hauptman Oswald Boelke, a youngster whose training under Immelmann was to make him the leading German ace at the time of his death in October, 1917.

It was Immelmann who drilled into his fellows the greater, even if not openly apparent, security of holding fire against an enemy until the last the range was exceedingly close.

Immelmann appears to have been a true Junker in the broader sense: imperialistic, arrogant, aristocratic and egotistical, and well up in the practise of sneering at those inferior in rank or in any way under them.

When the Allies made their stand in the First Battle of the Marne, it was Max Immelmann who saved von Kluck's army from annihilation by discovering and reporting, on a reconnaissance flight where the French and British were massed on the Marne.

Immelmann's early victories were undoubtedly because of superiority of machines and superior "use of guns," in addition to his exceptional study of tactics.

NO machine guns were carried by the earliest victims, while the Germans, through the ill-luck of Roland Garros of France in being shot down on April 19, 1915, were beginning to use a machine gun shooting through the propeller, Immelmann being equipped with one of these.

Garros, of an inventive mind, had devised a sychronizing device which would allow the passage of bullets between the propeller blades, except for an estimate 7 per cent.

To guard against this 7 per cent, Garros equipped his propeller blades with bands of hard steel, which deflected those bullets which otherwise would have shattered the screw.

When this device was found by the Boche upon his capture, the adept German artisans were quick to develop the idea into complete synchronization, with the Allies following in somewhat tardy fashion.

Despite his steadily growing success, Immelmann's name did not appear in official dispatches until Oct. 2, 1915, when he was cited for scoring his fourth victory—six short of becoming an ace, as under German regulation a man was to become an ace after registering 10 official victories, in contrast to the five set by the Allies.

On Christmas Day, 1915, Capt. Kastner, commanding the section, presented Immelmann with a silver cup, bearing the inscription, "To the Victor of the Air."

This seemed worthy of something in the way of celebration, so on Dec. 29 Immelmann and Boelke, who had been making patrols together, went looking for some more scores. In the air they became separated when Boelke went off chasing a couple of fellows named Joe from the English lines at Arras.

Returning, Boelke saw shell bursts to the west of Cambrai and when he arrived at the scene he was just in time to see Immelmann knock down one of two British machines. Boelke went for the other, with Immelmann holding off to let his prey have this one—if he could.

"That was a fine fight," Boelke wrote home two days later. "I had to deal with a tough fellow, who defended himself stoutly. But I forced him on to the defensive at once.

"Finally he could defend himself no longer, because I had mortally wounded his observer. It was now a comparatively easy job to shoot the fellow down, but when we got to 800 meters I ran out of ammunition, because I had previously used some of it on two others. That was his salvation.

"WE now circled round each other, but neither could do the other any harm.

"Finally Immelmann came to my aid, and the fight began all over again. I kept on attacking merrily, so as to confuse the Englishman.

"I tried to cut off his further progress by flying at him, etc., then my engine gave out and I had to land. I could just see my opponent disappearing behind the next row of trees and thought he would land there; I was delighted and, arming myself with a Verey pistol—I had no other weapon at hand—I rode across an horseback to take the fellow prisoner.

"But he had flown on. I made enquiries everywhere and rang up—no definite news obtainable. Then in the evening there came a report that the Englishman actually flew over the trenches at a height of 100 meters and got home.

"Smart of the fellow; he won't have many imitators! Immelmann could not go on shooting at him because his gun jammed."

On Jan. 12, 1916, Immelmann scored another victory, and almost at the same time, over Moucron village, northeast of Turcoing, Boelke shot down a Britisher.

By this time mentor and pupil, both winners of the coveted Pour le Merite, had become friendly rivals, so much so that public interest was keen.

Shortly afterward Boelke was transferred to Fighting Squadron 2, formerly the Metz Pigeons. There, while Immelmann's score stood at 11 enemy machines, Boelke shot down his 12th and was being chided over the telephone for that by Immelmann when he found it necessary to tell Max that he (Boelke) had just returned after shooting down the 13th.

THUS they went, on into the spring, but Immelmann's star began to wane with the equipping of the British with better machines and the synchronized and deadly Vickers guns.

He jousted with a young upstart named Ball, a Britisher whose name was beginning to be heard along the western front as that of a madman, although as

Keep U. S. Out of War—Be Neutral!

The National Legion of Mothers of America appeals to all New England women to join its campaign to keep America out of Europe's war and Europe's war out of America.

The Legion of Mothers asks every woman to sign the following card and to mail it to National Legion of Mothers of America, Box 228, Boston.

I PLEDGE

1—To oppose sending American soldiers to fight on foreign soil.

2—To support a program for adequate national defense.

3—To oppose any attempt to destroy the American form of government.

MANY YEARS AGO, at the beginning of his illustrious career, Arthur Brisbane wrote:

"Husbands should listen to their wives. The voice of a wife is often the voice of conscience, of wisdom . . . Wives can make history by making husbands do what is right."

Conditions have changed surprisingly since the writing of that statement, and women today are wont to prefer more DIRECT action. No longer content to act through their husbands, they are abandoning cloistral roles, pressing forward into business, politics and the professions, and proving their own sufficiency.

MAYOR-ELECT BURKE
"I'll Set a Pace"

Such a woman is Mrs. Alice D. Burke, who as the result of Tuesday's election becomes Westfield's mayor and makes history by being the first of her sex to head a Massachusetts municipal government.

A teacher who was compelled to relinquish her job because of marriage, Mrs. Burke literally begins life anew at the age of 46 and promises to "set a pace in running a city which will make all other executives sit up and take notice."

Men cannot dismiss this feminine achievement by calling it a "lone example" or by attributing it to "chance." Women's progress in recent years has been too convincing to be ignored or ridiculed.

Doubting Thomases have only to study the careers of such women as Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, first woman governor of Wyoming, first woman director of the United States Mint and first woman to have her likeness on a medal struck by the government; Dr. Florence May Morse of Los Angeles, first woman to hold the title of full professor of merchandizing; Miss Avis Lobdell, executive representative of the Union Pacific Railroad, and Miss Helen Dryden, famous automobile designer.

Then Doubting Thomases will probably ask: "When will Massachusetts have a woman governor and how soon will a spinster or matron sit in the White House and administer the nation's affairs?"

One thing becomes more and more apparent. Women are not satisfied merely to own 70 per cent of the private wealth of the nation, to be beneficiaries of 80 per cent of the life insurance, to inherit 75 per cent of all estates probated, to have 65 per cent of savings accounts, totalling more than $14,500,000,000, and to enjoy a collective fortune exceeding $200,000,000,000.

Women are determined TO HAVE A REAL VOICE in the management of the economic system in which they have so vast a stake.

HISTORY BOOKS "FIB," said Dr. Louis P. Benezet of Dartmouth College recently in a thought-rousing address to Maine teachers.

"We do not always dare tell the truth," he declared. "For instance, no school history text book can be sold both north and south of the Mason-Dixon line."

There is nothing new or startling about that criticism. It has been made thousands of times by distinguished men.

Patriots are very often inclined to see events from the viewpoint of their own countries or areas. Few, if any, are prone to glorify the enemy or former enemy.

A similar situation exists in current war propaganda. France is pro-France, Britain is pro-Britain and Germany is pro-Germany.

It is therefore exceedingly necessary for the American reader to think as he digests the dispatches that pour out of Paris, London, Berlin and other European capitals.

Enough thinking of this kind will keep belligerents' hands out of Americans' pockets and belligerents' guns out of Americans' hands.

Human Side of News -:- By EDWIN C. HILL

AS THE SHADOW of the Russian Bear looms over Europe, echoes are heard from many quarters of the deep and devouring concern for the future which fills the minds of every human being devoted to the idea of peace and liberty and the opportunity to produce works good in the sight of God.

No such terrific question mark has raised its sinister height in modern times—not even in the days of Napoleon.

For the world today is torn and distraught by something new—a war of ideologies, to which, for bitterness and savagery, only the ruthless religious wars of the Seventeenth Century can even remotely be compared.

Prophets of gloom hang back in the shadows and mourn the collapse of civilization. Some predict the quite literal return of the Dark Ages, with the light of learning all but extinguished and the flame of freedom quite snuffed out.

Some, darkly imaginative, peer into an unpredictable future and vision Cossack horsemen trampling down the fields of France and stabling their shaggy-maned steeds in Notre Dame.

Still others profess to see a 10 years' war or a 20 years' war, ending in mutual exhaustion and mutual ruin, with humanity cast back a thousand years.

BUT there are brave voices raised in a confusion of doleful tongues, voices of cheer and hope; gallant, indomitable.

John Masefield, Poet Laureate of England, sees humanity going through a dark hour. He is convinced from some inner wisdom, vouchsafed only to poets, it may be, that while there may be frightful convulsions ahead, man, being a spirit, will turn to the things of the spirit when he has made himself too wretched.

ENGLAND'S POET LAUREATE AND MRS. MASEFIELD
Hopeful for Civilization Despite Russian Bear's Shadow

"I have not any feeling of hopelessness," says John Masefield. "To be hopeless is the last resource of mankind. If one way of life fails, mankind will try another. After trying a great many ways, mankind will find the right one."

From our neighbor to the north, Our Lady of the Snows, comes a firm and confident voice from another man of letters, John Buchan, Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, expressing what one must suppose is in the minds of so many: the conviction that, in the long run, however painfully, good must triumph over evil. And he expressed this idea by quoting from Daniel Webster:

"There is something on earth far more powerful than any autocratic and tyrannical government, and that is the aroused indignation of civilized men."

MAN is an incredibly tragic creature—the most calamitously tragical of living things. Some hideous destiny compels him to destroy the good and useful things he himself has made by wit and labor and love.

The same race that mobilizes scientists all over the world to combat plague mobilizes other battalions of scientists to devise new ways of destroying its own kind.

There would be simply no limit to the expansion of man's genius were it not for this disposition to turn upon himself.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

HYDE PARK, Nov. 9—Something unusual and quite delightful happened to us on our way to the lecture in St. Louis. It was only three blocks and we were actually allowed to walk it!

All the exercise one obtains on these trips is getting on and off the trains and in and out of automobiles. The rest of the time is spent either in a hotel, or viewing a project, or on the train.

I have always hoped that the motion of the train might give a little exercise, but I confess that when nearing the last two days of a two-week trip the chance to walk three blocks and breathe the fresh air and stretch one's legs, even though I had on evening clothes and evening slippers, was a very welcome change!

IN ALMOST every place I have visited on this trip I have been asked to say something about the community chest drive. It seems to me that the value of the organizations supported by the community chest should by this time, with the help of active groups of women, have become well known in every community.

There is a great advantage in having a co-ordinated drive for funds, because one can be sure that each organization has been carefully investigated and allotted the amount of money which is needed to run it to the best advantage.

MRS. ROOSEVELT
Walks in Evening Clothes

When one is constantly receiving appeals for this or that charity, the difficulty of making personal investigations leads one frequently to ignore the appeal.

I am beginning to feel the same way about appeals for war refugees in different parts of the world.

I wish very much that we could have some central organization, now co-ordinating civilian relief, make the contacts necessary for the best results with foreign countries. They could allocate funds needed for adequate care of refugees in our own country and help other nations whose refugee loads are far greater than ours.

WE are a neutral country at peace and, in spite of the fact that our first duty is, of course, to meet the needs of our own citizens and give our best thought to the solving of domestic problems, still those of us who have anything to spare should feel the call of suffering humanity all over the world.

Think of sixty million Chinese war refugees! "Bowl of Rice" parties held all over the United States under the auspices of the United Council for Civilian Relief in China have probably helped to alleviate their suffering.

The overhead expense could be cut down and a better job could be done for the Chinese, Spanish, Polish, Czecho-Slovakian and German refugees, if it could be co-ordinated under some experienced and able organizer.

Not that this game promises to be the best one . . . Husing's decision was based only upon the fact that his house-guest, Broderick Crawford—who accompanies Husing everywhere—must visit his grandmother in Waltham.

But it's as true as this column's statement Tuesday that Sheriff John F. Dowd is going to resign—and that has been denied quite freely . . . In Walter Winchell's column Monday the report was passed along that Gloria Youngblood, the beauty with a dash of Cherokee blood, was slated to marry a "Florida business man" . . . Walter qualified the item by labelling it a rumor, and the chief point of his story was that there was nothing veracious in the chatter of several false prophets who have been maintaining that Miss Youngblood would become Mrs. Rudy Vallee . . . Gloria will be the bride of neither a Florida business man, nor Vallee . . . It's too late . . . More than two weeks ago, Miss Youngblood became Mrs. Eddie Meade . . . He was surprised to find that his guest was unusually well-dressed, and an animated conversationalist with a broad-A dialect . . . They drove a few miles up alongside a roadside oasis where he breaks the ride, a daily stint with him, by enjoyment of a glass of beer.

BUT HIS VISITOR protested . . . "Oh, have a real drink, this is on me . . . What have you, bartender, in the way of some bonded rye?" was the visitor's invitation . . . So they downed a couple of jiggers of seventeen-year-old stuff . . . The hitch-hicker produced a ten-dollar bill, and they returned to the car. When they reached the outskirts of a famous town, the genial guest asked his host to follow a route which led to an estate "Come in, won't you and have a drink with me?" was the next invitation . . . More mystified now than before, the Bostonian decided to follow through and accepted . . . The stranger let them in with a latch-key, and pressed a button for a servant.

THEY HAD ANOTHER jolt or two . . . "I suppose you're waiting for an explanation," the guest turned host now volunteered. "Well, here it is . . . Day in and day out, I drive to Boston . . . That is six days in and six days out . . . On the seventh, I hitch-hike . . . I thumb rides to town, and then thumb my way home . . . I carry along a fifty-dollar bill and a few tens in case I have bad luck . . . Only once have I been forced to hire a cab . . . It breaks the monotony." . . . It also rates as possible first-class entrant in that radio feature which tells the public about strange hobbies.

STUDIOS ARE OFFERED 'MASS FLIGHT'

By Louella O. Parsons

Norma Shearer

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 9—The most fantastic plot I've heard in years is the one in "Mass Flight," a movie just written by Bartlett Cormack. All the more fantastic because it's based on something that might actually happen. Cormack shows the sending of hundreds of planes across the Atlantic to England now that the embargo is lifted. If these planes are sent by boat there is a chance of their being lost in wholesale numbers. If they are flown over they have a better chance of making it.

When I expressed amazement at the story I was told that such a plan is actually on foot, with Captain James Adams in charge. Naturally, every American boy who pilots a plane across the Atlantic into a belligerent country would lose his citizenship—a big penalty even though he would be paid $2000 for the flight. All of this is brought out in the Cormack story, copy of which went to every studio in Hollywood today. Talk about hitting the headlines, this one is more timely than the ham and eggs defeat.

Merle Oberon came with Eddie Goulding; "The End of the Day," the French picture now at the Esquire is attracting lots of attention among the film folk. DAILY STORY

Ambition

MARJORIE EVANS was the prettiest girl in her high school class. Blonde, lavishly talented and endowed with the most pleasing personality, she was truly outstanding.

Naturally, every boy was her "slave." At least a dozen would have abandoned plans for higher education if Marjorie could have been induced to consent to matrimony. Especially was David Montgomery a devoted swain.

But David's cause was lost from the start. He lacked money and consequently could not dress so well as schoolmates.

Jim Brennen had none of David's handicaps. Jim, a newcomer to our town, dressed faultlessly, drove a "best" car and spent money with the recklessness of a Broadway playboy.

It was understandable that Jim should be the Number One Boy in Marjorie's affection. Nobody was surprised when they eloped to New York.

BUT THE METROPOLIS was not the "glamour city" Marjorie had imagined. Too soon she had to face the fact that her husband was Jim Dawson, sought by police everywhere, an active member of the underworld and a vicious killer.

Pride is powerful and, in Marjorie's case so powerful, that she preferred abuse to humiliation back among her school friends.

Dawson was wont to mistreat her in the presence of his gangster associates and frequently compelled her to participate in many of his crimes. For 10 years she endured this horror. For 10 years she suffered because the only alternative was imprisonment.

But one night an unknown strength crept upon her and, with a blade in her hand, she moved to the couch where her spouse lay in a drunken stupor.

Grimly, she slit his throat!

SEVERAL DAYS LATER two men stood outside of the cell in which Marjorie Dawson was confined. One was a lawyer, tall, grim, determined. The other was a guard, old, sentimental, anxious.

"But, Mr. Harris," the lawyer was saying, "the woman is a cold-blooded murderess. She herself admits that she participated in crimes with her husband. It would be detrimental to my career if I took such a case. The evidence is over-powering. You're getting 'soft' in your old age."

David Montgomery left the jail, hailed a cab and hopped in.

A vision of a beautiful, blonde girl came out of the long ago and floated before his eyes. But he quickly dismissed it.

David Montgomery, rejected and embittered, had also found ambition.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

THE ROOM is untidy—perhaps filthy. It is filled with ugly, depressing objects. It would make you miserable to stay in that room. It would spoil your day. You have no time to clean the room. Perhaps it is not your room to clean. So you go out of that room and shut the door behind you.

You shut the door behind you, and as you shut it, you forget that room.

You shut a door. That's a simple act. But it's also one of the most significant acts on earth. Life couldn't go on unless we were able to shut doors behind us and go out to other things.

Life ISN'T going on for many people because they haven't shut doors behind them. They have shut physical doors—But they have not shut mental doors.

DID IT EVER occur to you that you must shut the door of your mind if you are ever to succeed in life?

You must. And you can. You can protect your mind as surely as you can protect your body. You can shut doors on the things you do not wish to remember or consider.

You can shut your mind against the demoralizing memories of remorse and grief and anger and fear.

Nor do you need to be very strong or very smart to do this. It is one of the simplest exercises of the human will. A child can learn to do it. As a matter of fact, most children do it unconsciously. Children put unpleasant experiences behind them very easily and quickly. They think what they please—and often we consider them cold-blooded little monsters because they do.

But they're not cold-blooded. They're simply healthy and natural. It is only when we humans become older, and all gummed up with sentimentality and self-indulgence that we lose the trick of shutting doors . . . and waste our lives roaming around through our accumulated mental clutter.

YOU CAN SHUT mental doors and you are neither very mature nor very civilized unless you do so.

We think it is a sign of sensitiveness to "live in the past" . . . to "feel things terribly" . . . be unable to shake ugly, unhappy impressions. But it is not a sign of sensitiveness. IT IS A SIGN OF LAZINESS . . . OF MENTAL SLOVENLINESS AND WEAKNESS.

You've no more right to waste your time and energy by sitting in the messy shadows of memories than you have to park yourself in some dirty back lot, with your face turned from the busy, sunny streets.

IMMELMANN AIR ACROBAT

yet Ball had not accomplished much in the way of knocking down the Boche. At any rate, Immelmann came off second best in the indecisionless brush, being outflown, outshot and generally outsmarted by the lad who was to become the Boy Ace of Britain.

When dawn of June 18, 1916, came up, Lieut. Max Immelmann, not yet 26 years old, had 16 enemy planes to his credit officially and undoubtedly had little question in his mind that ere long he would have doubled this score.

He made several patrols during the day without incident of record, but he was never to see night fall on that 18th of June—or on any other day.

There has been considerable dispute as to his end, some crediting Capt. Albert Ball, the English youngster (later to be killed by Baron Richthofen) with Immelmann's death and some giving the credit to Capt. McCubbin (then lieutenant), the English ace who had scored 23 victories officially when he himself was killed.

In the light of the official British report, however, there should be little dispute. This report, apparently made after some little investigation, reads:

"On June 18 one of our F. E. aeroplanes, whilst patrolling over Annay at about 9 p. m., attacked three Fokkers.

"One immediately retired whilst the other two turned toward Lens and proceeded to attack another F. E. which was then approaching from that direction.

"The first-mentioned F. E. (pilot, Lieut. McC.; observer, Corporal W.) followed and joined in the fray, and, diving steeply on one of the attacking Fokkers, caused it to plunge perpendicularly into the ground. It was seen to fall to earth by one of our anti-aircraft batteries.

And with his passing, there was closed the first chapter of the sky raiders in the World War.

Another episode in the Sky Raiders series will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

DIAMONDS, sables and orchids, traditional badges of wealth and society, combined to make Boston's most lavish daytime display of fashions as the Morning Musicales began their 12th season yesterday at the Hotel Statler . . .

From both a musical and fashion standpoint the occasion was an outstanding success . . . Diminutive Bidu Sayao, Metropolitan Opera soprano, delighted the huge audience with her glorious voice and charming personality . . . and she was something to write about from a fashion viewpoint as well . . . She wore a tight fitting long black velvet gown with yoke and tiny sleeves to sheer black lace and her copper hair was partly covered by a perky black feather hat . . . Diamonds sparkled on her ears, throat and wrists . . . After the concert many of the subscribers had a close-up view of her for Mrs. John W. Myers, chairman of the concerts, escorted her into the foyer to meet committee members . . .

Mrs. William S. Febiger wore a gay rose velvet turban with her beige and brown checked two piece suit . . . Mrs. Robert M. Stevenson, who occupied her regular seat beside Mrs. Arthur Bell, wore a sage green suit trimmed with Persian lamb, and an angora hat to match the fur . . . Mrs. John D. Adams, who believes in matching her costumes to her lovely hair, had a blueish tint in her coiffure and wore a blue wool dress with a chenille snood on her matching hat . . . She was one of the many concert-goers who continued the morning's festivities by lunching downstairs in the Statler dining room . . .

Debs and Harvard Boys at Opera House

DEBUTANTE AND HARVARDIAN swing and jitterbug fans had difficulty keeping their feet from tapping and their heads from nodding in rhythm to Bojangles' tricky, swingy tap numbers in "Hot Mikado" at the Opera House last night . . . The performance was for the benefit of the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals and attended by a very fashionable and full sized audience . . .

Joan Griess, Nancy Burrage and Harriet Bundy, each with a stalwart escort from across the Charles sat way down front and others enjoying the grand show were Mary and Dorothy West with a couple of beaux, Mrs. Harwood Ellis, debutantes Sally Reed, Elizabeth Jenney, Betsy Inches, Mary Louise Rice, Eleanor Motley, Anne Rogers and many others.

QUIZ HUB 'POLS' IN RADIO WAR

to those named include the following:

Former Governor Charles F. Hurley, former Lieut. Gov. Francis E. Kelly, former Congressman Richard M. Russell, who once was mayor of Cambridge.

Richard D. Grant, a former Hurley secretary and now a state Public Utilities Department commissioner.

Merritt Travis, Boston city councilor, who was active in Mayor Tobin's campaign for that office; Asst. Dist. Atty. Garrett Byrne and Edward M. Sparrow, former Dist. Atty. Robert T. Bushnell of Middlesex County Car. Ernest Trefethen of advertising fame and E. E. Rideout, weather man for Station WEEI.

It is understood that approximately a dozen other persons will be summoned to appear before the federal commission.

It is known that early this year the Mayflower Co. applied for a license to establish a broadcasting station in Boston, on the WAAB frequency on the ground that the Mayflower group would better serve the public interest.

The Federal Communications Commission, as a result, notified WAAB to file application for a renewal of its license, an automatic step necessitated by the Mayflower move.

It was on motion of the Mayflower group, made last August, that the federal commission ordered the hearings held in Boston.

Immediately after the hearings opened, Paul Spearman, counsel for Station WAAB, filed objections on the ground that no notice of the hearings was given the station officials until Tuesday of this week.

WANTS CHARGES LISTED

Spearman charged that failure of the commission to give the station due notice was "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable."

Trial Examiner Porter overruled Spearman's objection and overruled also the attorney's request for particulars of any charges made against his client station.

"We do not know," said Spearman, "whether we are charged with murder, arson or treason. We are told to come down and listen to the evidence and perhaps then find out what we are being tried for."

James Gum of the Mayflower Broadcasting Corporation said he had four witnesses ready to testify.

2 Feared Dead In Hotel Fire

WINSTED, Ct., Nov. 9 (AP)—Two persons were believed to have lost their lives early today in a fire which burned the 100-year-old Beardsley Hotel to the ground.

State Police said Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy, 77, a widow, and George Ryer, 55, both guests at the hotel, were unaccounted for after his subordinates completed a check of the survivors.

ARE EGGS GOOD FOR YOUNG CHILDREN? | DO LIQUIDS INCREASE HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE?

—By DR. WALTER H. EDDY—
Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau

Questions concerning foods, sanitation and health will be answered only if a stamped, addressed envelope accompanies your request. No exceptions can be made to this rule. Prescriptional advice can not be given, nor can food or drug samples be analyzed. Address Dr. Walter H. Eddy, 57th st. at 8th ave., New York City.

Feeding Eggs to Children

"I have heard so many varied opinions about eggs I should like to know yours. Are they poisonous to children? My child is 2 years old." J. S. H.

Dietary specialists are urging greater use of eggs (the yolk in particular) in the diet of children to supplement the milk with factors which it lacks and which are present in abundance in the egg yolk. The use of egg yolk in the diet of little children is desirable because it furnishes proteins of excellent quality, a rich supply of phosphorus and iron, and vitamins A, B, D and G.

It is always advisable to introduce it cautiously, as some very young children are disturbed by it. It can be combined without cooking with orange juice, ro mixed with soft crumbs of bread or mashed potatoes; or it can be boiled until mealy, rubbed to paste and spread on a piece of bread. From one-half to one yolk daily is as much as should be given.

In May Good Housekeeping (page 99) Dr. Josephine H. Kenyon gives specific instructions about feeding egg yolk and egg white to children up to 12 months old. A child of two years who is getting three or four cups of milk a day does not need the white of the egg. It is superfluous and is best withheld, as it makes the protein of the diet unduly high.

VITAMIN B is the anti-neuritic vitamin, because its omission from the diet results in a multiple nerve inflammat'on or "polyneuritis" associated with beri-beri disease. This vitamin is obtained by eating vegetables, fruits and whole cereals, such as graham flour, corn meal and bran.

Water Drinking in High Blood Pressure

"Is it true that one with high blood pressure can drink too much water?" J. F. B.

If you drink liquids too freely when your blood pressure is high, the volume of the blood is increased, and this increase in volume tends to raise the pressure. If you eat foods which contain too much protein, which is the tissue builder of the body and also of the blood, you may increase the nutritive matters in the blood to such an extend as to increase the pressure. I would say, however, that no rigimen can be prescribed which will fit all cases, and the personal physicians should give directions.

Curing Constipation

"Will you please advise me how cure constipation? I eat quite a few vegetables, but that does not seem to help me." A. P.

This query is of particular interest to me because so many people assume that they can cure constipation by the use of a laxative without paying any attention to the cause of the constipation. The first step in case of trouble of this sort is always to find out the cause, and that demands a careful diagnosis by a competent physician.

Kiss and Tell? Never!

Don Juan lipstick won't tell...it won't leave tell-tale smears and won't do heaps of things you've deplored about lipsticks. It does not come off on table linen or make crimson smudges on cigarettes or "eat off" in the course of a meal. Altogether, it's something pretty special. Don Juan should be applied according to directions. Then it stays and stays, giving a soft, natural appearance rather than a greasy, coated look. While it isn't greasy, it isn't drying either...contains only purest ingredients. Smart shades, $1.00; refills, 60c; trial size, 10c.

Flavor Jellies With Herbs

By MARTHA LEE

Jellies with a "history"—that's what you have when you make them of herbs. For instance, there's basil, known centuries ago as the "king's herb" on account of its dignified beauty. The fragrant thyme boasts of a Grecian name, meaning incense. And ancient legend tells us that the beautiful girl, Minthe, was transformed into our familiar green plant by Persephone—who was just plain jealous of Pluto's love for the maiden.

Don't think, though, that the jellies are hard to make, just because herb history goes back through the ages. These fool-proof recipes turn out the quivering spreads with a 30-second boil, a flavor exactly like the sun-dried herbs, and they give you two-thirds more glasses into the bargain. Indeed, every bit of jellies like these speak of your economy, cooking ability and knowledge of what's new for the dinner table.

Follow directions exactly for a perfect product and be sure to make enough for the gift list later on:

BASIL JELLY

(Makes about 5 medium glasses)
1 cup basil infusion
¼ cup vinegar
3 cups sugar
Coloring
½ bottle fruit pectin

Pour 1¼ cups boiling water over two tablespoons basil. Cover, let stand 15 minutes, strain to remove herbs. Measure infusion into three-quart saucepan, adding water if necessary, to make one cup. Add vinegar and sugar and mix. Place over hottest fire and while mixture is coming to a boil add coloring to give desired shade. Use coloring which fruit acids do not fade. As soon as mixture boils add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

THYME JELLY

(Makes about 4 medium glasses)
1 cup thyme infusion
¼ cup vinegar
3 cups sugar
Coloring
½ bottle fruit pectin

Pour 1¼ cups boiling water over 2 tablespoons thyme. Cover, let stand 15 minutes, strain to remove herbs. Measure infusion into 3-quart saucepan, adding water if necessary, to make 1 cup. Add vinegar and sugar, and mix. Place over hottest fire and while mixture is coming to a boil, add coloring to give desired shade. Use coloring which fruit acids do not fade. As soon as mixture boils, add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

PINEAPPLE-MINT JELLY

(Makes about 7 medium glasses)
2¼ cups syrup from canned pineapple
¼ cup lemon juice
5 cups sugar
Green coloring
½ bottle fruit pectin
½ tsp. spearmint extract

Drain syrup from canned pineapple. Squeeze and strain juice from 2 medium lemons. Measure sugar, pineapple syrup and lemon juice into large saucepan and mix. Place over hottest fire, and while mixture is coming to a boil, add coloring to give desired shade. Use coloring which fruit acids do not fade. As soon as mixture boils, add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire and add extract. Skim; pour quickly. Paraffin the hot jelly at once.

You Can Be Beautiful

Blush Your Way to Beauty

By ARLINE GOULD

OF COURSE you could take a good, smart slap in the face and like it . . . because you know that stimulation is the basis for real beauty renewal of the complexion. But there's a much easier way than that!

One of the three important steps in a really unusual complexion ritual is call'ed "blushing." This is a stimulation from deep down in your tissues, which brings up the nourishing forces of the blood stream. And that, they say, is the whole secret of compexion youth. Enough and from your own blood stream can keep a skin positively beautiful and fresh, and that certainly has reason on its side.

It's done with a gentle, warming, sweetly fragranced liquid cream. And it should be used before your night cream, when you go to bed of a night, in order to get the utmost out of the cream. Or if you want to look like a fresh-picked gardenia right out of the ice bower, use it before a big night out.

Just smooth a tiny bit of it all over your face. In a moment your skin will tingle. After you remove the cream you'll notice a wholesome pinkness that will stay for the longest time. There is your proof that the all-important circulation of blood has been roused. We have never seen anything better for the sallow-faced tribe. And a week of this rite will see the sallowness gone!

If you'd like to learn more about this "blushing" liquid cream, which helps your complexion [illegible] itself from the outside in, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week days until 5:30, or write enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Note to Teacher

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Most schools require a note explaining the absence of little Jack Fallow, the previous day or days. So many of my readers have written me lately asking for a general form for such a note that I'd like to suggest this brief one, showing the correct salutation and correct form of notation:

DEAR MISS ALLEN:

Jack was in the steam yesterday, and because John had a cold I thought it wise to keep him at home. Will you please excuse his absence? Very sincerely yours,

MARY SMITH BROWN.

Lucinda Ballard, Stage Costumer, Adept in Many Trades

Her Theater Jobs Tops

By PEGGY DOYLE

When Lucinda Ballard—who has designed the far from chic but nonetheless quietly effective clothes for Dwight Deere Wiman's folksy production, "Morning's at Seven," at the Plymouth—first came to New York she was 21, red-haired and full of joie de vivre.

A dozen years, more or less, have passed. The former New Orleans debutante is still red-haired and full of joie de vivre. In that time she has been married, divorced, has had two children both as attractively red-haired as their mother—and has managed with a third the sleep Edison required.

And it is not the Manhattan tempo that has caused this dynamic Southerner to miss sleep. Miss Ballard, a tremendously energetic lady, not content with becoming Broadway's outstanding designer of stage costumes, has taken on a few extra chores such as a decorative screen business, mural painting, offstage clothes designing and interior decorating.

Outside of that, her smart triplex apartment is one of the smoothest jobs of interior decorating in town, her cuisine is unrivalled and her household management perfection itself.

"It's all because I'm so lazy," said Miss Ballard, unexpectedly, yesterday, in the Ritz-Carlton dining-room, as she salted, peppered and buttered a steaming dish of hominy. (That's another contradictory thing about Miss B.—she eats and grows thin.)

"I mean it, truly. I'm so lazy that I've developed executive ability. Although I love to cook I detest mapping out meals day after day and so I've worked out a system for my housekeeper. I've jotted down next to my favorite recipes the changes that, for me, improve them. I've also made out quite an extensive filing system of menus, according to the seasons. I'm constantly adding to it. All my housekeeper has to do is to refer to it every morning, leaving me free of household chores."

Miss Ballard's genius for design will next be demonstrated in "Three After Three," the Simone Simon-Mitzi Green-Mary O'Brien musical now in rehearsal for its Boston opening at the Shubert Theater on Nov. 27.

'Bachelor Mother' Tops Tremont Bill

One of the season's most delightful comedies, "Bachelor Mother," co-starring Ginger Rogers and David Niven, is the current screen feature on the Tremont screen. With "Man About Town," it continues through Saturday at the Tremont.

PRO TESTS AT BOSTON

"Professional Auditions," with professional acts competing for future bookings, is to be a weekly feature, starting tomorrow evening, at the RKO Boston theater.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR., and Margaret Lockwood are starred in "Rulers of the Seas," which will have a special Hollywood preview at midnight, Armistice Day eve, at the Paramount.

Prison Mutiny Epic Opens Tomorrow at Trans-Lux

"Mutiny in the Big House," prison drama highlighting the notorious prison break at Colorado's Canon City state penitentiary a decade ago, opens tomorrow on Trans-Lux screen.

It is the story of Johnny Gates' struggle for his soul and two opposing forces, Father Joe, the prison chaplain, and "Red" Manson, ruthless killer.

The picture has an all-male cast and is a tribute to "the men of every creed who work every day, ill paid and unhonored, to save the souls and rebuild the lives of broken men."

A gigantic jailbreak, in the course of which Father Joe, under fire, walks alone across the prison yard to save the lives of the innocent, climaxes the story.

Charles Bickford plays the priest, and Barton MacLane "Red" Manson. Others in the cast are Dennis Moore, Charley Foy, William Royal and Russell Hopton.

The co-feature, "Quick Millions," is another chapter in the lives of the interesting Jones family.

Many New Films

Walter D. Edmonds' exciting novel of the Mohawk Valley during the American Revolution today comes to the Metropolitan screen in the John Ford directed film edition "Drums Along the Mohawk."

Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda are the co-stars of this brilliant Twentieth Century Fox Technicolor production which, it is rumored is one of years most exciting action dramas. Supporting names in the cast include such favorites as Edna May Oliver, Eddie Collins, John Carradine, Doris Bowdon, Jessie Ralph, Arthur Shields and Roger Imhof.

The second feature, "Too Busy to Work," is the latest in the Jones family series.

Gary Cooper, Hollywood's six-foot he-man, returns to Loew's State and Orpheum screens today in "The Real Glory," thrilling tale of the Philippine Scouts and their heroic bravery at the conclusion of the Spanish-American War when the Philippines were overrun by insurrectionists and religious fanatics.

The central theme of "The Real Glory" revolves around the exploits of the scouts who became a constabulary on the island and rallied to their support loyal natives and peaceful Moros.

The co-feature is "Scandal Sheet," with Otto Kruger and Ona Munson.

"Torpedoed," which is lifted from today's headlines, comes to the Paramount and Fenway screens today.

Filmed off Scapa Flow and using many of the most important units of the British fighting fleet as background, this exciting naval battle thriller's highlight is the torpedoing of Britain's mighty dreadnaught, the Royal Oak, which was actually sunk by a U-boat recently.

AUDITION

By OLGA L. ROSMANITH

THE telephone rang while she was washing her hair. It was Freddy, eager and excited. "I've got a chance for you, Gretta. Mr. Zara's going to hear my song. He wants a girl, too, for the show. He's coming here to hear you sing it."

Gretta wiped soap out of her smarting eyes. "Oh, Freddy, that's wonderful. When is he coming?"

"In half an hour, Gretta. You must come right over."

"Oh, Freddy, my luck's out. I simply can't come."

"Call yourself a trouper? You must drop anything you're doing if you want the chance—anything! You simply must come."

"I was washing my hair, Freddy. My hair's wet."

He burst out laughing. "Is that all? I'm expecting you in five minutes. There'll be time to run through it before he comes."

REGRETS BEING GOOD SAMARITAN

The wind was warm outside. She ruffled her damp curls with her fingers as she hurried round the block.

A door opened below her as she reached the third landing. A man's voice said roughly "Get out and stay out?"

Gretta stopped and looked down the square well of the staircase. She saw a very blonde girl pushed against the rail below, her upturned face strained and white. "Don't treat me like this, Louis. You love me. I know you do. You'll be sorry again. I know it."

The door was banged in the girl's face and Gretta heard her beating her fists against it. "Don't send me away, Louis. I've no place to go. I'll do it this time. I'll kill myself——"

There was no response. The girl gave up. Gretta saw her begin to walk down slowly, hat in hand, limp blonde hair covering her face as her head hung dejected. Gretta raced down after her. "Don't go," she said. "Don't do it. Don't do it."

The girl turned and stared in abject misery. Gretta took her arm and pulled her gently. "Come up with me and tell me all about it. What have you got to lose if I can't make you change your mind?"

The girl's voice was as desperate as her face. "Nothing will change my mind." She jerked her arm away. Gretta seized one of her wrists in both hands and hung on with all her might. "Freddy," she shouted. "F-r-eddy!"

Several doors opened at once, and a tousled dark head appeared over the rail at Freddy's landing. "All right—I'm coming," he called.

The blonde girl went limp as if she had no fight left in her. Gretta and Freddy helped her up between them. In his little sitting room, dominated by the ancient Steinway, he mixed a drink for the awkward stranger. She took it listlessly and drained half of it in one gulp. Freddy took Gretta into the kitchen. "This is a nice thing," he said, voice and eyes mildly reproachful. "Of all the moments to get mixed up with her, this is not the moment."

"I know, Freddy. But she can come out here and wait till it's over. What else could I do? She was going off to commit suicide."

"She never will, Gretta. I've seen her before. She has a boy friend below. They're always in trouble."

"Who is this man, Freddy? Some one important?"

"Sure. He owns the Mirage. He's been considering my songs. He likes them exclusive. And I get a hearing. But the best luck—his singer walked out last night. He needs a new one—he said he would listen to you."

Gretta's heart began to skip again. "Hope I can do it justice ——"

"You can. Come on out and try it over—"

The bell rang downstairs and Freddy pressed the buzzer. Gretta screwed up her courage. "We'll be through in half an hour," she said to the stranger, "perhaps less. Do you mind waiting in the kitchen?"

The girl drew herself languidly out of the chair, went into the kitchen and took the remains of her drink with her.

Freddy sat at the piano and played the opening bars. Mr. Zara crossed his short fat legs and Gretta thought how comical his tiny feet looked in their highly polished little shoes. Then she saw the kitchen door open noiselessly and stand ajar. That queer girl wanted to listen. Gretta missed her cue and apologized. Freddy played the opening bars again.

She heard her voice on the air, thin, unfamiliar and unsteady. She sang too fast and Freddy had to quicken tempo to keep up with her. She couldn't stop now, but the spirit of the thing was missing.

"Very Nice," said Mr. Zara when she had finished. He clipped the end from an expensive cigar. "Mind if I smoke? But you didn't sound like a heartbroken dame that just lost her boy friend."

The kitchen door opened wide and the blonde girl stepped out. She said in a deep, husky voice, "Let me show her how to sing it."

The Cast of Characters in "Audition"

FREDDY, who writes songs and hopes that he can place

GRETTA, the girl he loves, in a position to sing them.

Gretta bites her lip as the blonde she had saved from suicide sings herself into the job Freddy had intended was to be her own big chance.

He looked straight at the stranger. "You want the spot, I take it?"

"I sure do," she replied definitely. Her manner indicated her belief in the survival of the fittest when a job was in question. Mr. Zara and Freddy both began to talk at once. Gretta bit her lip to chase the tears and looked out of the window. Presently the visitors went away together.

Freddy came to Gretta, his fawn-like face quivering with something forceful he was about to say. He looked at her and changed his mind. "Don't worry," he said. "I'll get you another chance."

"It isn't that, Freddy. But I'm so ashamed of the murderous work I did on your song."

"It wasn't as bad as that, Gretta ——"

"You know it was. She showed me up. Well, anyhow, I knew that even my best was no good when I heard her sing it—"

"Maybe she's not so hot when she's normal. Remember, she was just in the mood for it ——"

Gretta movde from the window and picked up her pocketbook. "I'm not so hot any time, Freddy, and you're too kind to tell me so. But thank you for trying for me. Now I must go——"

LOVE DICTATES, HENCE AN AWAKENING

Freddy took the pocketbook from her and absently put it on the sacred empty surface of the piano top. Took her two hands and forced her to look at him. "I'm going on trying for you and you're going on trying for yourself. You have the right stuff in you. You can get what you lack—the extra thing that girl has—the feeling——"

"Feeling," breathed Gretta, "you think I have no feeling——"

"Sorry, dear, you don't show any. I write love songs. You have to know love—even a little—to learn how to put them over——"

Gretta wrenched her hands away as her tears spilled over. "Why, Freddy, how can you be so dumb? I guess I know more about hurt love than she does."

Freddy could not have looked more surprised if his piano started to play his songs back at him. "But, Gretta, I've loved you from the first night I met you. I didn't dare tell you. What could you see in me when you have so much talent? But if I didn't love you, why would I work so hard to further your ambition?"

Gretta's lip still trembled, but she began to laugh. "My ambition! If you only knew what it really was!"

Freddy blinked and pushed his hair back with a long, nervous hand that had a perceptible shaking in it. "I'll take a chance on guessing right, Gretta." And he took her into his arms.

E. A. BREST OFFICIAL OF GOFKAUF STORES

Epiraim A. Brest, Boston business man and attorney, is to be new executive vice-president of Gofkauf's Stores, it was announced today.

Brest's whole history has been connected with Greater Boston. He was born on Beacon Hill, and his family later moved to Chelsea.

EPHRAIM A. BREST

There he went through grammar schools, graduated from Chelsea High School, and entered Boston University. After attending B. U. for several terms, he transferred to Northeastern University, graduating from the law school there in 1926.

He passed the bar the same year, and began practise with his brother, Aaron Brest.

While attending Northeastern he tells of running a market in Upham's Corner.

"You talk about work-hour laws today," he said. "I used to open that place at 5 a. m., work till 7 p. m., when I went to my classes, then come back and stay there till 11 p. m."

After practising law a year and a half he joined a Boston business firm to establish its law department, and became its counsel, public relations manager and personnel manager.

A month ago, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Brest, he moved to Parkman st., Brookline, where Mr. and Mrs. Brest will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary next Sunday.

His change to the Gofkauf organization is in the nature of a promotion.

AUSTEN LAKE

Princeton's Second Football Tragedy

PRINCETON HAS HAD MORE THAN ITS SHARE of bad football fortune in the last two years. Twelve months ago a husky halfback named Bill Lynch—a boy freshly examined and O. K.'d by the college medico—fell dead of heart failure while jogging around the practice field. Last Saturday a 240-pound tackle named Don Herring, Jr.—burliest lineman in the Ivy League, received a leg injury which required amputation of the limb above the knee.

When Lynch died his father wrote a pathetic letter to the Tiger authorities asking them not to let his son's death interfere with the football schedule. "Bill would have wanted it that way," he said.

And yesterday Donald Herring, Sr., said, "I hope there will be no foolish outcry against football over an injury that is almost unprecedented." Both are Spartan Fathers!

AUSTEN LAKE

Here and there about the land the mortality list of football is beginning to mount and by the middle of next month, Dr. Mal Stevens of New York University and Floyd Eastwood of Purdue, men who keep the game's gruesome record, will have completed their sad list. The average for the last nine years is more than 30 and the yearly medical bill for football, according to Dr. Stevens, is more than $1,000,000.

THE MORTALITY RATE IN FOOTBALL THIS fall will probably be average far below the Black Year of 1931 when there were 49 deaths. And then, to offset popular alarm the rules lawyers inserted a lot of legislative pinecracks like forbidding hardshell armor, flying tackles, clubbing with the hands.

Temporarily it seemed to work a cure with fatalities dwindling to 32 deaths in 1932 27 in 1933 and 25 in 1934. So in the intervening years the lawyers were satisfied to do very little tinkering, in the belief that they had curbed the game's natural violence within bounds of reasonable safety.

As far as the regulations in the rule book go they have. Last year, for example, the rules makers forbade outfitting players with bakelite cleats, hard as kitchen porcelain and shaped like thimbles. The lads wore these weapons screwed into the soles of their boots like enlarged bobnails and the toll of ripped flesh, gouges and contusions was tremendous.

But players still wear inflexible headguards, sole-leather shoulder cups, papier mache thigh plates and sometimes parrot bill face masks, all of which are as hard as an auto fender and nearly as risky in collision. So that the impact of two girded warriors, in complete suits of football mail, is often as pulverising as a headon-smash between two cruising rodeo steers.

A further contributory cause to injury comes from failure of game officials to enforce the rule against swinging of heels by blocking players, who usually lash out with their boots after missing a rolling block and sometimes sledge an opponent chest high. The effect is like being kicked by a cow.

STILL, THE MAJORITY OF FOOTBALL deaths this year as in the past has not occurred on college fields. One hundred and twenty-four of the eight-year total of 244 fatalities have happened on sandlot or club games without benefit of preventative science or medical attention. Ninety-three have been in high school ranks, mostly among village teams where only rudimentary precautions are taken. So that the college deaths since 1930 have numbered only 27—and I say "only" by way of comparison.

Many of the mortalities listed by Floyd Eastwood can hardly be charged against the game. One item this fall tells of a boy in Butte, Mont., who fractured his skull on a tent stake bordering the field. A few others resulted from organic ailments and infection due to bad supervision and medical care. A kid named Harley Merris slipped on the gymnasium steps in Chicago and died from a rib-pierced lung. Another named Tom Sheehy in Philadelphia was struck by an auto while recovering a punt in a street bordering the field.

Herring's injury at Princeton, the result of a leg locked in a jam of players and a terrific pressure which broke the arteries of the knee cannot be prevented by rules. The nature of the game is violent and a toll of broken bones, sprung ligaments and creaky joints is its natural heritage. But I submit that, by lessening the rigid armor being worn, including the coal scuttle helmets, the shoulder cups and thigh plates, the reciprocal impacts will be softened and the score of fractures and contusions will be fewer. I have no record, but my impression is that fatal football accidents were scarcer when our gridiron daddies wore haypads, quited breeches and pliable headguards.

HEALEY HARVARD'S HOPE FOR VICTORY OVER ARMY

By DAVE GLUECK

When Harvard's sophomore team meets Army on Saturday its chances of victory will depend for the first time as much on a lineman as on any of the spot-lighted ball carriers.

Tom Healey, veteran tackle, has been the balance wheel of Coach Harlow's Green grid machine.

Against Penn, Dartmouth and Princeton he missed just six minutes of play and turned in performances that caused his coach to name him the best Harvard tackle in the last five years.

Several times Dick has stopped practice in order to show the sophomores good plays made by his senior star, telling them to watch and try to emulate his work.

TAKES VITAL TASKS

Tom is the only Crimson to completely escape injury, and be assured of his starting position for every game. Defensively, he has stood out an invulnerable salient in the Harvard line.

As running tackle, his secondary blocking assignments have been as numerous and difficult as those of the guards, several plays having been changed in order to let the reliable Irishman throw the crucial block and turn the ball bearer loose.

HEALEY NEVER GIVES UP

Healey's greatest help to the team has come late in games, when Penn and Dartmouth too far ahead to fear a Crimson comeback have opened up, and threatened to run up scores that would annihilate Harlow's youngsters.

With five sophomores in the line and three or four more in the backfield, there was danger that the team would crack and be charged right out of the Stadium.

The credit for holding these boys together and allowing their powerful opponents only two touchdowns

FROM RING TO SING—A competent fighter was Eyvind Laholm when he was heavyweight champion of the U. S. Navy a few years back. He could sing, too, so he passed up hopes for the world heavy title. Here he is tuning up with daughter Sybil, three-and-one-half, for his opening at the Metropolitan in New York, where he soon will star.

Harvard to Face Ohio State

Harvard will play a home-and-home football series with Ohio State, Big Ten grid power, in 1943 at the Stadium and in 1944 when the Crimson visits Ohio, it was reported today.

Chicago, another member of the Big Ten but far from as formidable as Coach Schmidt's Buckeyes, will be dropped and Ohio State added.

Two of Harvard's staff, Wes Fesler, end coach, and Floyd Stahl, who does the scouting for Dick Harlow and coaches the varsity baseball team, are graduates of Ohio State.

Ohio State this season has beaten Missouri, 19-0; Northwestern, 13-0; Minnesota, 23-20, and Indiana, 24-0. It lost to Cornell, 23-14, after leading the Big Red 14-0.

Tulane, Alabama Settle Southern Title Debate

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 9 (AP)—Coach Jim Crowley of Fordham, about a month ago, called the turn on the Tulane-Alabama clash here Saturday when the Green Wave will endeavor to end talk that Tennessee is supreme in the South.

"Alabama's got a better defense, Tulane a better offense, and it should be a whale of a game," Crowley said.

None should know better, for his Rams were defeated, 7-6, by Alabama and 7-0 by Tulane.

With an off day last Saturday, Coach Red Dawson has for the first time this season been able to point his Greenies for a victory local enthusiasts could use to support their theory that mighty Tennessee could be taken by Tulane if the teams met. They won't meet, however, unless it be in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.

After a series of "breather" games Tennessee beat Alabama 21 to 0. Tulane, in its first chance for a comparison with Tennessee, would need to do approximately as well to sustain the claim that the Volunteers never would crack the Tulane Powerhouse.

Neither are defeated or tied in Conference. Tennessee has won three, Tulane two.

B. U. to Start 5 Newcomers Against Cinci

Boston University's grid squad leaves Newtonville at 5:40 tonight headed for the Mid-West to clash with the University of Cincinnati in an inter-sectional battle Saturday afternoon.

The Terriers, with its two veteran stars, Ray Needham and Jim McDonald, sidelined are going to depend on sophomores against the powerful Bearcats from Cincinnati. In addition to the loss of this pair, Johnny Wedemeyer, 190 pound triple threat sophomore halfback will also remain at home.

George Murphy who has been selected as the left end to succeed McDonald and Sid Michaels who will fill in for Ray Needham at center are both sophomores.

This gives the Hanleymen five newcomers, more green timber than the Terrier mentor has dared use in a starting game all season.

Charlie Thomas and Jim Sullivan, the halfbacks, carry the Terriers in running plays. Both are small but unusually fast and Coach Hanley has hopes that the offense will click well enough to allow either or both of them to get out in the open occasionally.

Walter Williams at fullback will take care of the passing and kicking department. Walter, after a brilliant start, has bogged down in his aerials the past two weeks but if yesterday's practice means anything, he has again found the range.

If Williams starts hitting eligible receivers it will help the Terrier cause no little.

6 Husky Seniors To Start Game

There will be six seniors in the Northeastern starting lineup that takes the field next Saturday in the Huskies' windup against Upsala. Three others will see action, while the remaining two seniors have been sidelined because of injuries.

Capt. Connie Sullivan and Carl Johnson at the ends wind up three years of football; Joe Howlett at right guard and Art Anderson at center will be in there for the last time. In the backfield, Ken Harding and Ray Yetten hang up their cleats for good after Saturday afternoon.

Joe Beaton, Alex Struzziero and Ducky Holmes, all backfield reserves, are certain to see action.

The tough blow, though, is to Jerry DeNapoli and Bob Gurney. DeNapoli dislocated his knee three weeks ago and finished his football career prematurely, while Gurney also has a bad knee. Oddly enough, Gurney's injury is improved enough so that he might possibly be able to play, but since Bob is captain of the basketball team, Coach Dunn refuses to take any chances.

MIDDLESEX, 30-6

CONCORD, Nov. 9—St. George's grid team was no match for Middlesex school, the latter winning, 30 to 6.

BOB JEREMIAH
Sure of Wing Berth

PICS OPEN AT ARENA

With the Quebec City Beavers' game at the Arena on Saturday evening, Coach Hago Harrington is still up in the air concerning his third Olympic line.

About the only positive spot is the right wing berth where Bob Jeremiah seems to have returned to his 1936-37 form. Bob flashed real speed and punch against the Beavers in Canada, and Hago is satisfied that Jerry will workout well on the right side. The other two spots are the real problem, however.

Bud Foster of Melrose and Dartmouth would be the logical choice for the pivot job, except he has been unable to get into practice and he is still far from ready for a major game test.

On the other hand Al Cavelli, the ex-Boston University leader from Cambridge, is rounding to form well, and with a few more outings should aid the Boston cause no little.

Ts both Canadian games Art Smith, veteran defense man performed on the left wing. Art proved himself to be an excellent winger, and may clinch the job this weekend. Rollie Lamb, the former McGill ace, is another figure to be considered on the southpaw side, but Rollie needs a great deal more skating before he can be a serious threat for that position.

West Pointers Due Saturday

The Cadet corps of 1200 will arrive in Cambridge on Saturday morning. The corps will put on their annual spectacular parade in the stadium before the game and will march in Cambridge besides.

The Cadets will detrain at Stadium Station on the lower end of Boylston st. and Memorial drive at 10 a. m., and will march directly to Harvard yard. The visitors will eat in the Harvard Union and at 12:45 will form in the Harvard yard and will march to the stadium via the John Weeks bridge.

The entire corps will enter the field at 1:15 and will parade on the playing field for 15 minutes before the squads come on the field for pre-game practice.

Eagles Weak At Tackles For Detroit Tilt

The Boston College special will pull out of Newtonville tonight at 7:14 with 33 active players, injured Tackle Leo Kidhardt and an official entourage of a half dozen more bound for the West and a game of football with the Detroit Titans Saturday.

The Frank Leahy Eagles were to work out this afternoon at Alumni Field. The session will be devoted to planning ad-ques to the Detroit plays as put on by the local freshmen.

With Kidhardt on crutches Joe Manzo still favoring a knee that has kept him out of game competition since the Florida fiasco, and John Yauckoes the starting right tackle none too happy about his wrist on the knee, Boston College may have tackle trouble at Detroit.

Sophomores Steve Levanitis who is scheduled to start at left tackle and Al Morro, big discus thrower from Providence who has been dividing the right tackle job with Yauckoes are the only injured tackles who have seen real action thus far this year.

GRIFFIN, MAHON MAKE TRIP

Bill Griffin and Tom Mahon will be taken along. Griffin, is one of those boys who is always "so near and yet so far" in the quest for first string honors, while Mahon who played plenty of ball under Dobie last season has not had the same success this semester. Both, however, are big, strong and willing workers, and should they be called upon Saturday might surprise.

Lou Montgomery, who was ruled out of last week's Auburn game, may start at right halfback. Either he or high scoring Vito Ananis will open at the slot, and during the course of the game, both should see lots of action.

The return to action of Dick Harrison, who participated in the Auburn game and did a grand offensive job, comes at a most opportune time.

Alex Lukachik bruised his knee badly last week, and Harrison's reappearance will lighten the Bridgeport, Ct., boy's load considerably.

MANZO'S SPOT QUESTION

With Kidhardt out it will be interesting to note the position of Manzo, erstwhile first string tackle. Levanitis will open at the left tackle slot, but Manzo should be an early substitution. If Joe's bothersome knee fails to stand up, the Eagles will be in a bad way for reserve tackle strength.

With Goodreault, Yauckoes, Kerr, Gladchuk, Capt. Schwotzer Levanitis and Lukachik scheduled to open from right to left in the line, the Eagle starting backfield as yet remains a problem.

The opening quartet probably won't be known until just before the battle. But there remains little doubt that Henry Toczylowski will call the signals to either Montgomery or Ananis at right halfback. O'Rourke, Jauron or McGowan at left halfback and Pete Cignetti at fullback.

The 34 who'll entrain tonight are:

Backs—Henry Toczylowski, Ed Cowhig, Dave Lucey, Charlie O'Rourke, Justin McGowan, Bob Jauron, Vito Ananis, Lou Montgomery, Frank Maznicki, Charlie McCarthy, Pete Cignetti, Adolph Russell.

Ends—Alex Lukachick, Dick Harrison, Gene Goodreault, Leo Strumski, Ed Zabilski and Adolph Pasulk.

Tackles—Joe Manzo, Steve Levanitas, John Yauckoes, Al Morro, Tom Mahon, Bill Griffin and Kidhardt.

Guards—Captain Ernie Schwotzer, Joe Zabilski, Frank Galvani, George Kerr, Dave White and Tony Tassinari.

Centers—Chet Gladchuck, Walt Dubzinski and Leo Logue.

By JACK CONWAY

THE FAVORABLE vote for pari-mutuel betting in New York will result in betting totals that will be staggering. Million dollar handles will not be uncommon at New York tracks.

Pari-mutuel betting makes the widest appeal to the small bettor. This class of bettor is able to buy a $2 show ticket if they wish, and it is these small wagers that have made racing so profitable for owners of pari-mutuel tracks.

The bookmakers fought pari-mutuel betting in New York for years, but were finally snowed under by a tremendous vote when Old Jawn Public had an opportunity to decide the question for himself at the polls.

New York has permitted oral betting at the tracks, while thousands of hand books have operated without too much interference from the authorities. The hand books, of course, will continue to do a flourishing business, but those persons who wish will be able to go to the track and buy their tickets through the mutuel machines.

Other than Belmont Park the New York tracks have not the accommodations necessary to handle the crowds that will attend the races now there are pari-mutuels. It will be necessary for the track to make drastic alterations in their clubhouses and grandstands.

New Jersey will also have pari-mutuel betting next year. The vote in New Jersey had much weight on the final decision in New York. New Yorkers felt that if they did not have pari-mutuel betting to compete with New Jersey that their tracks would suffer heavily.

Battle to Get Proper Horses

WITH NEW YORK and New Jersey racing going full blast, there will be a terrific battle for horses by the Eastern tracks.

Suffolk Downs, Narragansett Park and Rockingham Park will be called upon to meet the most severe kind of competition. The racing secretaries of the three New England tracks will have to spend many a sleepless night trying to think up ways and means of getting the better horses for their races.

The competition between New York and New Jersey will be so keen that the tracks will have to offer high purses to get the horses they desire.

Horsemen have always liked New York. If they have a horse that has a chance of winning, they can get plenty of people who will bet money for them. One leading trainer told me that he had a backer in New York who would wager $5000 any time he had a horse who looked as if he could win.

"I got a good share of the profits," said the trainer, "and didn't have to take any of the losses."

The New England tracks recognize the danger that confronts them, and will probably co-operate as much as possible. It will be necessary for them to do so, if they are to get the horses they desire. The boys and girls will be around with fresh money for the mutuel machines, but they will have to have something to bet on. It would be a bit cruel to ask the stewards, placing judges and directors of the tracks to compete in races. I wouldn't wager $2 that any of them could run around a mile track even if given all day to do the task.

Drive for Legalized Lotteries

NOW THAT pari-mutuel betting has been legalized in New York, the drive for legalized lotteries and legalized bookmaking rooms will go merrily forward. There are millions of people in the United States who bet through bookmakers and who buy various kinds of lottery and number tickets. You could not convince any of them they are doing anything wrong any more than you could tell a person who was sipping champagne during the prohibition era that he was an enemy of law and order.

It will be argued that the Federal and State governments could get their share of the bookmaker business and lottery sales if these businesses were legalized. It will be charged by those persons opposed to legalizing any form of gambling that bookmaking and the sale of lottery tickets is bad for the public morals.

There are people who cannot see any moral difference between making an illegal bet on a horse race in downtown Boston, and then paying a ten-cent fare to Suffolk Downs and making a legal wager on the same race. These individuals insist that everything in life is either all wrong or all right.

The advances made by pari-mutuel betting would indicate that the public is still very much betting minded, and is anxious that things be brought out into the open where they may be supervised properly.

AMERICANS ENTER NHL TITLE GRIND

By the Associated Press

Red Dutton's New York Americans will make the new National Hockey League season official tonight by engaging Montreal's effervescent Canadiens at Montreal.

Last of the league to swing into action, the Americans nevertheless don't intend to be last at the other end of the trail and have vowed to start sprinting early.

The Canadiens trailed the league most of last season and even with a new coach and new players they were not regarded very highly in pre-season estimates.

But they startled the league Sunday night by thrashing the Chicago Blackhawks 4-2 and now are about to answer the big question of whether this was just a flash in the pan or a real threat to the leaders.

Les Canadiens now are handled by Pete Lepine, one of Montreal's hockey immortals, and he has gathered in such fresh assistance as Marty Barry and Doug Young from Detroit and Ray Getliffe and Charley Sands of the champion Boston Bruins.

Although still predominantly a league for veterans, the Americans appear stronger this term than last. The moving of Charlie Conacher from a wing to the defense has strengthened the team at one of its weak spots.

GOMEZ'S DEER NEARLY LOST IN FIRE

"Lefty" Gomez, the New York Yankees' pitcher, is home from a successful hunting expedition into Canada. Although he did not stop long at his winter home in East Lexington, he did leave one deer at a local meat market for seasoning, but nearly lost it when fire broke out and badly damaged the store.

Artisans Tackle English at Hive

Boston English and Mechanic Arts high teams, today for the meeting at the Braves field for the Boston championship in the first game of a double bill.

Dope favor was to trade Memorial in the night game of the colorful program.

English, perennial champion of the city schools, was on the second day betting today, with the unbeaten Artisans expected to run into their winning march.

Memorial was the favorite on the basis of its recent impressive win over South Boston, when the Artisans had no trouble gallopping to victory over the stout district eleven.

Lord Jeffs Work Up Speed on Dummy

AMHERST, Nov. 9—Amherst Head Coach Lloyd Jordan sent his Lord Jeffs through a long aerial scrimmage drill as he continued his polish preparations for Saturday's home clash with undefeated Tufts.

Prior to the scrimmage session, which saw the Jeffs polishing up their running attack as well as their passing maneuvres, End Coach Paul Eckley and Line Coach Milt Bruhn worked with their respective charges on the blocking, dummies in an effort to increase drive in the Jeffs' line play.

Harvard Banks On Tom Healey

by running plays as generally and justly accorded to Healey.

Tom is the most outstanding scholar-athlete Harvard has had since Barry Wood. He is captain-elect of the baseball team and ranking pitcher in the Eastern Intercollegiate League with two brilliant victories over Yale, one of which he clinched with a nine-inning home run.

Concentrating in Romance languages he has had such a brilliant record that he'll very probably be graduated Phi Beta Kappa, Magna Cum Laude.

PLANS MEDICAL CAREER

But Tom's real interest is medicine, and rather than accept a Rhodes Scholarship, for which he would be a certain cinch, he plans to enter Harvard Medical School.

The Francis Hardon Burr Scholarship, awarded in athletics and studies, has already been put aside for him. He is a member of the student council, president of the undergraduate athletic council, on the executive council of the Varsity Club and on the board of directors of the Harvard Co-operative Society. Other offices and honors have been rejected for want of time.

This is the third time Healey will face the Cadets, and Army's great tackle, Stella, must be almost as used to seeing Tom opposite his as some of his military plays.

ANXIOUS FOR WIN

It's been so long since the Crimsons have scored a victory over the land service team that they are as much an object opponent as Yale, and a victory over them would go a long way toward assuaging the thrice-injured Crimson dignity.

With Macdonald, Koufman and Hallett ready for some relief duty, and the Princeton improvement continued, Harvard's chance looks slightly better than the quoted 2-1.

Jiffy Joe Gardella, who suffered a terrific pounding in Tigertown, is ready to start Saturday. A broken nose and two black eyes haven't kept him from looking very hot on the receiving end of Spreyer's passes, and with the Harlow planned offense opening holes for the first time Arlington's dandy may slip through the militia for plenty of yardage.

Bowser Matmen Show at City Club

McLaughry Set On First Team

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 9 (AP)—Indications in the Brown camp were that a full complement of regulars will be sent in against the Yale Bulldogs at the start of Saturday's Bowl encounter. The A eleven that started against Tufts has remained intact all week and has worked as a unit.

That contingent had Capt. McLaughry, Blount, Stepczyk and High in the backfield; Prodgers and Bates, ends; McNeil and Taylor, tackles; Manrodt and Mawhinney, guards, and Crooker, center. Two of that crew are sophomores, Dick High, halfback, and Bill Crooker, captain of last year's freshman eleven, center.

Harold Detwiler, Brown's new speed back, is scheduled for early relief duty as is Tommy Nash, veteran end who has been handicapped all season by a succession of injuries. Today's work followed the pattern set earlier in the week. The Bears drilled on fundamentals and followed that with a long dummy scrimmage during which Yale plays and Brown's own plays were gone into extensively.

Service Halted On Race News

CHICAGO, Nov. 9 (AP) — Wire service to M. L. Annenberg's racing news customers—mainly bookmakers—was suspended at noon today throughout Illinois.

The Illinois Bell Telephone Co. took down facilities serving an estimated 1000 customers, and by noon the network stretching into elaborate theater-seated parlors in the well-to-do neighborhoods and into rear rooms of cigar stores in shabbier districts had ceased functioning.

Counsel for Annenberg's Nationwide News Service failed in a last-minute effort to obtain an injunction to prevent the utility from carrying out an ultimatum from the federal and state prosecutors to halt service.

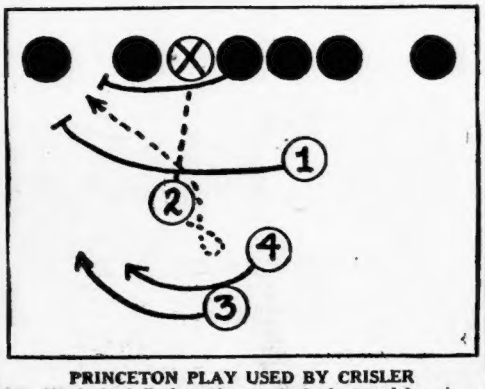
Coach Larson Shifts Navy Backfield

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 9 (AP)—Coach Swede Larson indicated he intended to keep shifting his varsity backfield right up until game time, if necessary, to find a smooth combination to toss against Columbia Saturday.

Larson was pleased with the work of Sammy Boothe, 195-pound Wyoming youngster, in the No. 1 back post. His mates in the first string were Tommy Blount, stand-out of the Penn game, Pat Gray and Monty Whitehead.

Ouimet Appointed To U. S. G. A. Board

Harold C. Pierce of The Country Club was nominated for the presidency of the United States Golf Association and will be elected automatically to that office at the annual meeting of the association in New York in January.



PRINCETON PLAY USED BY CRISLER

Simple football plays often work the best, and here is a smash through tackle used effectively by Fritz Crisler while at Princeton and now being used at Michigan. The ball goes to Back 2, who pivots and fakes a pass to 3, but retains the oval and drives straight inside the left tackle.

Osmanski 2nd In Yards Gained

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 (AP)—The race for individual leadership in the National Football League is narrowing down to two and three-man battles right down the line, according to official statistics released.

In ground gaining, Joe Maniaci of the Chicago Bears, with 501 yards, is only nine ahead of teammate, Joe Osmanski, pro "freshman" from Holy Cross; Parker Hall of Cleveland's Rams leads Ace Parker of the Brooklyn Dodgers in pass completions, but Parker tops Hall in efficiency; Perry Schwartz of Brooklyn has only a four-catch margin over Don Hutson, Green Bay Packers, and Sam Boyd, Pittsburgh Pirates, in pass receiving; Ralph Kercheval, Brooklyn veteran, is one field goal ahead of Ward Cuff, New York Giants; and there is only one touchdown separating John Drake of Cleveland from Osmanski in the scoring race.

Every section of New England will be represented in the Hearst All-America amateur boxing tournament that opens at the Arena on Monday night.

There has been a rush of top flight simon pures to enter this tournament in view of the fact that the survivors of the Eastern finals, which take place in Boston on Dec. 18, will journey to San Francisco to compete in the grand nationals on Jan. 25.

Monday night's tourney will be the first of the preliminary shows. The other preliminary contests will take place at the Arena on Nov. 20, Nov. 27 and Dec. 4.

EIGHT TITLE CLASSES

The New England finals will take place at the Garden on Dec. 11. There will be bouts in the eight championship classes on Monday night for experienced boxers, while the 126 and 147 pound classes will be for novices.

Every amateur leather tosser in New England has his eyes glued on the west these days, for to the fortunate young men who come through with an Eastern All-America title at the bouts to be held at the Garden on December 18, there will be a trip to San Francisco.

Only the winners in the New England All-America open classes on December 11 will be eligible to battle against the "pick" of the crop from New York, Albany, Syracuse and Baltimore in the Eastern Finals.

Managoff Downs O'Mahony

Bobby Managoff of Chicago, son of the famous old-time grappler of the same name, skyrocketed to quick fame in Boston when he scored a victory over Dan O'Mahony, former world's champion, in two out of three falls at a Paul Bowser show at the Arena.

Managoff, schooled in the fine points of wrestling by his dad, displayed brilliant bursts of speed and courage under fire.

Danno won the first fall in 13m. 25s. with his Irish whip. Managoff came back to score the second toss in 9m. 40s. with a drop kick as O'Mahony came off the ropes. The Chicago wrestler took the third fall in 13m. 35s. a drop kick putting Danno out of commission. Managoff had previously been tossed through the ropes to the floor of the Arena.

Clothing Firm Head Is Feted

A dinner was held on Saturday night in celebration of the third anniversary of Morris Simon's management of the Boston branch of Crawford Clothes stores. A lifelong resident of Roxbury, Simon served overseas during the World War.

Morris Simon

He is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, D. A. V., American Legion, Jewish War Veterans, Elks, Knights of Pythias and other organizations.

"Crawford Clothes give you more for your money than ever before at the price you want to pay," said Mr. Simon in commenting today on the product he has sold as manager for three years.

"With the additional service of the 12 payment budget plan, I look forward with confidence to a greater volume of business than has ever been attained by this store."

Park-Tilford Salesmen Dine

Distributors and salesmen of Park & Tilford nationally known liquors were the guests of C. S. Harris, New England manager, at a dinner and sales meeting at the Cocoanut Grove in celebration of Park & Tilford's greatest sales year.

Extensive sales and advertising plans were outlined for the remainder of the year. The fall campaign will include substantial advertising in Boston newspapers featuring domestic whiskies and imported liquors.

It was announced that E. P. Stratton of Golden Dome Bottling Company, wholesale distributors, would be in charge of sales in this State.

Speakers included Mr. Harris, B. Pearlman, sales manager of the Golden Dome Bottling Company, and P. Glanzman, president of the Philip Glanzman Company of Rhode Island.

CARDINALS ARRIVE IN HUB TOMORROW

Catholic University of Washington, D. C., rolls into town tomorrow night. The invaders are very much in the limelight not only because they play St. Anselms at Fenway Park on Saturday but because of its victory over Detroit. As Boston College will face Detroit Saturday comparisons of the Catholic University and Boston College elevens will be in order.

In their six straight victories this fall the Cardinals scored 22 touchdowns. There were no field goals, but 15 of the tries for the extra point after touchdown succeeded.

Rocco Pirro, fullback, made five touchdowns; Frank Krawezel, one of the halfbacks, has made four; Krand Brostel, another halfback, made three, while Bill Griffin has made two.

Catholic University leads the East and is almost sure to be selected for the Orange Bowl, or the Sugar Bowl game against Louisiana State.

Spectators at the Fenway Park game on Saturday will see a team well versed in the Rockne system of plays. Coach Dutch Bergman was at Notre Dame under Jess Harper and also under Knute Rockne, and in 1916 was picked for All-American by both Walter Camp and Walter Eckersall.

Last Saturday Catholic University defeated Tulsa. The players and coaches hope to go through the season undefeated and attain national honors.

The Hawks are determined to redeem themselves and will atone for the defeat suffered when they played Boston College. Coaches O'Donnell and Jackson Cannell have pointed the Hawks for this big game.
